REGULAR SEASON - WEEK 2 WASHINGTON REDSKINS (1-0) vs. INDIANAPOLIS COLTS (0-1)

Sunday, Sept. 16 | 1:00 p.m. ET

REDSKINS HOST INDIANAPOLIS IN 2018 HOME OPENER

The Washington Redskins will play their first home game of the 2018 regular season when they host the Indianapolis Colts in Week 2. Kickoff at FedExField is scheduled for 1:00 p.m. ET.

Sunday's matchup will be the Redskins first time hosting the Colts since 2010. A win would hand Washington its first 2-0 start in regular season play since 2011 and give Redskins Nation their first win in a home opener since defeating the Jacksonville Jaguars, 41-10, on Sept. 14, 2014.

The Redskins sparked their 2018 campaign with a 24-6 victory last week on the road against the Arizona Cardinals.

Running backs Adrian Peterson and Chris Thompson, along with tight end Jordan Reed, found the end zone to help spotlight quarterback Alex Smith's stellar performance. During the contest, Peterson moved to 10th all-time in NFL career rushing yards and captured his 100th career rushing touchdown.

Thompson recorded five carries for 65 yards (13.0 avg.) and six receptions for 63 yards (10.5 avg.) while Reed hauled in four passes for 48 yards.

CLASS OF 2018: BOBBY BEATHARD ENSHRINED IN THE PRO FOOTBALL FAME

RICHMOND, Va. [Aug. 4, 2018] — Former Washington Redskins General Manager Bobby Beathard was enshrined in Canton, Ohio at the Pro Football Hall of Fame as a member of the Class of 2018. Beathard, the architect behind some of the most legendary teams in Redskins lore, was presented by former Washington Redskins head coach and Pro Football Hall of Famer Joe Gibbs.

Beathard's illustrious career as an NFL executive included 11 seasons as General Manager of the Redskins from 1978-88. After taking the job on Feb. 24, 1978, Beathard guided the organization to three Super Bowl appearances, including victories in Super Bowls XVII and XXII. Many of the players he acquired remained on the roster for the team's Super Bowl XXVI victory as well.

In Beathard's 11 seasons as General Manager, the Redskins averaged 9.5 wins a year. The team posted a regular season winning percentage of .625 (105-63) in that time frame, best in the NFC and second-best in the NFL. No team in that time frame posted a better postseason winning percentage than the Redskins, who went 11-3 in postseason play in his tenure for a winning percentage of .786.

Draft classes during Beathard's tenure featured three members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, including wide receiver Art Monk (1980, No. 18 overall), guard Russ Grimm (1981, No. 69) and cornerback Darrell Green (1983, No. 28).

The classes also featured four additional members of the Redskins Ring of Fame, including linebacker Monte Coleman (1979, No. 289), defensive end Dexter Manley (1981, No. 119), defensive end Charles Mann (1983, No. 84) and quarterback Mark Rypien (1986, No. 146).

Additionally, Beathard oversaw the college free agent additions of Redskins Ring of Famers Jeff Bostic and Joe Jacoby and supplemented the team with a number of former USFL stars, including quarterback Doug Williams and wide receivers Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders. All of the players listed were led on the field by Coach Gibbs, the former San Diego Chargers offensive coordinator whom Beathard hired prior to the 1981 season.

Beathard began his career as a part-time scout for the American Football League's Kansas City Chiefs in 1963. He earned an AFL championship ring with the organization in 1966 en route to the team's berth in Super Bowl I. He would later serve as a scout for the Atlanta Falcons from 1968-71 and as Director of Player Personnel for the Miami Dolphins from 1972-77 prior to joining the Redskins. He finished his career as General Manager of the San Diego Chargers, serving in that capacity from 1990-2000. In all, Beathard's teams made seven Super Bowl appearances, including one by Kansas City (1966), two by Miami (1972-73), three by Washington (1982-83 and 1987) and one by San Diego (1994).

Beathard was born in Zanesville, Ohio, on Jan. 24, 1937. He grew up in the Los Angeles area and attended El Segundo H.S. before playing quarterback at Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, where he helped lead the 1957 and 1958 teams to consecutive 9-1 records.

NFL WINNING PERCENTAGES (1978-88)

Under Beathard's guidance from 1978-88, the Redskins compiled a 105-63 regular season record (.625, No. 2 in the NFL) and an 11-3 postseason record (.786, No. 1) for a combined winning percentage of .637, the highest mark in the NFL in that timeframe.

COMBINED REGULAR SEASON & POSTSEASON WINNING PCT. (BEATHARD'S TENURE IN WASHINGTON, 1978-88)

Team	W	L	T	Pct.
1. Washington Redskins	116	66	0	0.637
2. Miami Dolphins	113	67	1	0.627
3. Chicago Bears	108	70	0	0.607
4t. Denver Broncos	106	71	1	0.598
4t. Los Angeles Raiders	107	72	0	0.598

WHAT TO WATCH FOR IN 2018

» The Redskins kicking off their 87th season in franchise history, dating back to their debut as the Boston Braves in 1932.

» The Redskins representing Washington, D.C., for an 82nd straight season, dating back to the team's move to the District prior to the team's 1937 championship season.

» The Redskins (594) winning six regular season games to become the fifth franchise in NFL history with 600 regular season wins all-time.

» The Redskins throwing at least 25 touchdown passes as a team in four consecutive seasons for the first time in team history.

» The Redskins amassing 4,000 passing yards in five consecutive seasons for the first time in team history.

» The Redskins exceeding 5,000 offensive yards for a 14th straight season. Only four other NFL teams have an active streak of 13 or more seasons with 5,000 yards (New Orleans, New England, Philadelphia and Dallas).

» The Redskins recording at least 35 sacks for a sixth consecutive season and the longest streak since the team recorded 35 or more sacks in 10 consecutive seasons (1983-1992)

» Quarterback Alex Smith looking to post back-to-back seasons with 4,000+ passing yards for the first time in his career.

» Smith looking to post back-to-back seasons with 20+ passing touchdowns and a passer rating over 100 for the first time in his career.

» Smith recording 3,000 career completions (2,877) and 200 career touchdown passes (183).

» Running back Adrian Peterson (12,372) chasing No. 9 Tony Dorsett (12,739) and No. 8 Eric Dickerson (13,259) on the NFL's all-time career rushing list.

» Peterson (100) chasing No. 6 John Riggins (104), and No. 5 Jim Brown (106) on the NFL all-time rushing touchdown list.

» Peterson (92.3) maintaining his average rushing yards per game mark, which currently ranks No. 3 all-time in NFL history and chasing No. 2 Barry Sanders (99.8) and No. 1 Jim Brown (104.3).

» Left guard Shawn Lauvao starting 14 games to record 100 career starts and playing in five games to record his 100th appearance.

» Wide receiver Jamison Crowder (657) chasing No. 7 Dick James (794), No. 6 Antwaan Randle El (907), No. 5 Brandon Banks (937), No. 4 Rickie Harris (1,005) and No. 3 Eddie Brown (1,150) on the Redskins all-time list of career punt return yardage.

» Crowder becoming the eighth player to record multiple career punt returns for touchdown with his next score, joining Brian Mitchell, Rickie Harris, Dick Todd, Bert Zagers, Cliff Battles, Mike Nelms and Johnny Williams.

» Tight end Jordan Reed (279) catching 21 passes to join Chris Cooley (429) and Jerry Smith (421) as the only tight ends in team history to reach 300 career receptions with the team.

» Reed, who posted a team-high 952 receiving yards in 2015, leading the team in receiving yards to join Bill Anderson as the only Redskins tight ends to lead the team in that category in multiple seasons (twice, 1959 and 1960).

» Reed (23) chasing No. 2 Chris Cooley (33) on the team's all-time list of career receiving touchdowns by a tight end.

» Reed (11 receiving touchdowns in 2015) recording 10 or more receiving touchdowns to join Bobby Mitchell (two) as the only players in Redskins history to post multiple 10-touchdown receiving seasons.

» Tight end Vernon Davis (549) chasing No. 8 Jimmy Graham (558), No. 7 Heath Miller (592) and No. 6 Greg Olsen (641) on the NFL's list of career receptions by a tight end.

» Davis (7,081) chasing No. 9 Rob Gronkowski (7,302), No. 8 Pete Retzlaff (7,412), No. 7 Greg Olsen (7,589) and No. 6 Jackie Smith (7,918) on the NFL's list of career receiving yards by a tight end.

» Davis (60) chasing No. 6 Shannon Sharpe (62), No. 5 Jason Witten (68) and No. 4 Jimmy Graham (69) on the NFL's list of career receiving touchdowns by a tight end.

» Wide receiver Josh Doctson becoming the first receiver to lead the team in touchdown receptions for a consecutive season since Leslie Shepherd (1998-99).

» Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan (113) adding to his streak of consecutive regular season games started, the longest active streak among active NFL linebackers entering 2018.

» Kerrigan starting 16 games to become the first player in team history to start 16 games in each of his first eight seasons. He would join Brandon Carr, Deon Grant, James Laurinaitis and Tony Parrish as the only defensive players in the NFL to accomplish the feat since the adoption of the 16-game schedule in 1978.

» Kerrigan leading the Redskins in sacks for a sixth time, passing Dexter Manley for the most seasons leading the Redskins in sacks in team history.

» Kerrigan recording 10 sacks in a season for the fourth time in his career to join Charles Mann (five) and Dexter Manley (four) as the only Redskins to record at least four 10-sack seasons since the NFL adopted sacks as an official statistic in 1982. [Note: Coy Bacon unofficially notched three 10-sack seasons from 1978-80 prior to sacks becoming official].

» Kerrigan reaching 7.5 sacks for a eighth consecutive season to become the fifth player in NFL history to post at least 7.5 sacks in the first eight seasons of a career. Only Jared Allen, Derrick Thomas, DeMarcus Ware and Reggie White have accomplished the feat since the NFL made sacks an official statistic in 1982.

» Kerrigan (seven) becoming the first player in Redskins history to post eight seasons with 7.5 or more sacks.

» Trent Williams making the Pro Bowl to become only the fifth player in Redskins history to record at least seven career Pro Bowl selections (Chris Hanburger, 9; Charley Taylor, 8; Darrell Green, 7; and Ken Houston, 7).

» Kicker Dustin Hopkins (74) chasing No. 5 Kai Forbath (80), No. 4 Shaun Suisham (81) and No. 3 Curt Knight (101) on the team's list of career field goals made.

» Hopkins attempting 12 field goals to become only the fifth player to attempt 100 career field goals with the Redskins (Mark Moseley, Chip Lohmiller, Curt Knight and Shaun Suisham).

» Hopkins (315) looking to move past No. 4 Shaun Suisham (329) and No. 3 Curt Knight (475) on the Redskins all-time career points list.

» Hopkins (team-record 34 in 2016) making 30 field goals to join Chip Lohmiller (three) as the only players in team history with multiple 30-field goal seasons.

» Punter Tress Way (four) averaging at least 45.0 yards per punt to join Pro Football Hall of Famer Sammy Baugh (eight) as the only players in team history to record five or more seasons with a punting average of 45.0 or more yards.

» Way (283) chasing No. 3 Pat Richter (338) and Sammy Baugh (388) on the team's all-time list of career punts.

» Quarterback Alex Smith leading his team to a 2-0 start in back-to-back seasons for the first time since doing so with the 49ers in 2012 and the Chiefs in 2013.

» Smith throwing for multiple touchdowns in consecutive weeks for the first time since Week 16 and Week 17 of the 2015 season.

» Smith throwing for multiple touchdowns in consecutive weeks to start a season for the first time since Week 1 and Week 2 of the 2013 season.

» Smith not committing a turnover for the fourth-consecutive week dating back to Week 16 of the 2017 regular season.

» Smith recording a passer rating above 100 in back-to-back games to start a season for the third time in his career. He accomplished this feat in 2017 with the Chiefs and 2012 with the 49ers.

» Smith winning his second straight matchup against a quarterback who was selected No. 1 overall. Smith and the Redskins defeated Sam Bradford (No. 1 overall in 2010 NFL Draft) and the Arizona Cardinals, 24-6, in the season opener and will face off against Andrew Luck (No. 1 overall in the 2012 NFL Draft) and the Indianapolis Colts in their home opener this Sunday.

» Running Back Adrian Peterson (100) scoring one rushing touchdown to move into sole possession of 7th place on the NFL's all-time list passing Shaun Alexander and Marshall Faulk.

» Peterson (14,457) registering 12 yards from scrimmage to pass Matt Forte (14, 468) for 28th on the NFL's all-time list.

» Peterson (14,457) recording 152 yards from scrimmage to pass Marvin Harrison (14,608) for 27th on the NFL's all-time list.

» Wide receiver Paul Richardson Jr. hauling in one pass to record 100 career receptions.

» Tight end Jordan Reed registering 69 receiving yards to pass No. 15 Bill Anderson and 137 receiving yards to pass No. 14 Rod Gardner on the Redskins all-time list.

» Reed (23) catching two touchdowns to take sole position of No. 10 among Redskins all-time touchdown receptions.

» Wide receiver Jamison Crowder (195) recording five receptions to become the 19th player in Redskins history to record 200 career catches with the team.

» Crowder (657) recording 138 punt return yards to pass No. 7 Dick James (794) on the Redskins all-time list.

» Crowder (one) returning a punt for a touchdown to become the eighth Redskins player to record multiple career punt return touchdowns, joining Brian Mitchell, Rickie Harris, Dick Todd, Bert Zagers, Cliff Battles, Mike Nelms and Johnny Williams.

» Tight end Vernon Davis (548) catching 11 passes to pass No. 8 Jimmy Graham (558) for career receptions by a tight end in NFL history. Graham is currently an active player for the Green Bay Packers.

» Davis (60) catching a touchdown pass to break a tie with former Redskins great Jerry Smith for seventh on the list of career touchdown receptions by a tight end in NFL history.

» Davis (60) chasing Shannon Sharpe (62) for the sixth-most career touchdown receptions by a tight end in NFL history.

» Davis (1,240) recording 76 receiving yards to move into 10th all-time for a tight end in Redskins history.

» Cornerback Quinton Dunbar recording an interception in consecutive weeks for the first time in his career.

» Defensive lineman Matt Ioannidis and linebacker Ryan Anderson recording a sack in consecutive weeks for the first time in their careers.

» Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan starting his 114th consecutive regular season game, the longest active streak among active NFL linebackers. Kerrigan has not missed a start in his NFL career.

» Kerrigan remaining as one of six NFL players (and only three non-quarterbacks) to have started every game since the start of the 2011 season (Brandon Carr, Patrick Peterson, Philip Rivers, Matt Ryan and Matthew Stafford).

» Kerrigan recording his fourth career interception return touchdown to take sole possession of second-most in franchise history. He is currently tied with DeAngelo Hall, Monte Coleman, Andre Collins, Brig Owens and Mike Bass (three each).

» Kerrigan registering a sack for at least two yards to record 500 career sack yards.

» Kicker Dustin Hopkins (318) scoring 12 points and passing Shaun Suisham for 4th on the Redskins kickers all-time scoring list.

» Hopkins (318) scoring 13 points and passing No. 11 Shaun Suisham and No. 10 Larry Brown on the Redskins all-time scoring list.

» Hopkins (five) kicking his sixth career field goal of 50 yards or more to take sole possession of third-most in team history.

A WIN OVER THE COLTS WOULD

... give the Redskins' their first 2-0 regular season start since 2011.

... mark the first win in a regular season home opener for the Redskins since defeating the Jacksonville Jaguars, 41-10, on Sept. 14, 2014.

... lift the Redskins to a 7-2 record at FedExField against AFC opponents in the Jay Gruden era.

... improve the Redskins' home record at FedExField to 85-83-1 in the regular season.

... snap the Redskins' three-game losing streak to the Indianapolis Colts and give them their first win since 2002. The Redskins picked up a home win against the Colts, 26-21, on Oct. 27, 2002.

...shrink Redskins' deficit in the all-time regular season series record against the Colts to 11-20.

...give the Redskins a 2-1 record against the Colts at FedExField.

... give the Redskins consecutive wins against AFC opponents dating back to last season when Washington defeated the Denver Broncos, 27-11, in Week 16. It will be the first time since the Redskins picked up back-to-back wins against the Cleveland Browns and the Baltimore Ravens in Week 3 and Week 4 of the 2016 regular season.

HEAD COACH JAY GRUDEN

Jay Gruden enters his fifth season with the Washington Redskins in 2018 after being named the 29th head coach in franchise history on January 9, 2014.

Previously a decorated quarterback in the college and Arena Football League ranks and a successful NFL assistant, Gruden has showcased his offensive acumen honed from his diverse football background throughout his tenure with the Redskins.

In 2017, the Redskins won at least seven games for their third straight season for the first time since a four-year streak from 1999-2002, marking the fourth-longest streak of seven-win seasons in team history. Gruden's team reached seven wins despite dealing with substantial injury issues throughout the season, as 72 different players appeared in game action for the squad, the second-most used by the team in a single season since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger, trailing only the 108 used to complete the 1987 strike season.

Among the team's highlights in the 2017 season was the team's 4-0 record against NFC West opponents, the franchise's second full-division sweep since NFL realignment in 2002 and the team's first since 2005. The season also produced three Pro Bowlers, with linebacker Ryan Kerrigan, guard Brandon Scherff and tackle Trent Williams all earning return selections among the league's best.

A year earlier, Gruden guided the Redskins to an 8-7-1 record in 2016, giving the franchise back-to-back winning seasons for the first time since 1996-97. The team was led by Gruden's record-shattering offense, which posted team records in total net yards (6,545), net passing yards (4,758) and yards per play (6.40), ranking in the Top 3 in the NFL in all three categories.

Gruden's offense — once called "easily one of the three or four best designed offenses in the NFL" by Andy Benoit of The MMQB — was more than just historically efficient and explosive that season. The distribution of the offensive contributions allowed eight Redskins players (DeSean Jackson, Pierre Garçon, Jamison Crowder, Rob Kelley, Chris Thompson, Jordan Reed, Vernon Davis and Matt Jones) to finish the season with at least 500 yards from scrimmage, tying the 2011 New Orleans Saints for the most in a single season in NFL history.

In 2015, Gruden led the Redskins to an NFC East Championship, posting a 9-7 record to complete the second "worst-to-first" turnaround in team history. Gruden became the sixth coach in team history to lead the Redskins to a playoff berth within the first two years at the helm, joining Ray Flaherty, Dutch Bergman, Dudley DeGroot, George Allen and Joe Gibbs.

Under Gruden's guidance, the 2015 Redskins featured what was at the time the most prolific passing attack in franchise history. Quarterback Kirk Cousins, named the starter in the middle of the preseason, set then-single-season team records for attempts (543), completions (379), passing yards (4,166) and 300-yard passing games (seven) while throwing 29 touchdown passes, including at least one in all 16 games. Cousins' success coincided with the emergence of tight end Jordan Reed, who finished the season with 87 receptions for 952 yards (both team records for a tight end) with 11 receiving touchdowns.

Gruden assumed control of the Redskins in 2014 and guided the team through a campaign in which three different quarterbacks (Robert Griffin III, Kirk Cousins and Colt McCoy) recorded victories as starters. He installed an offensive system that produced two Pro Bowlers in his first season (tackle Trent Williams and running back Alfred Morris).

Excluding interim coaches, Gruden, 46 at the time of his hiring, became the team's youngest head coaching hire since hiring eventual Pro Football Hall of Famer Joe Gibbs at 40 years of age in 1981. He became the first Redskins head coach hired directly from an offensive coordinator role on another team since Norv Turner in 1994.

Before joining the Redskins, Gruden spent his previous three seasons as offensive coordinator for the Cincinnati Bengals. In his tenure in Cincinnati, the Bengals averaged 10 wins a season, making three consecutive playoff appearances and earning an AFC North championship in 2013. Members of the Bengals' offense accounted for seven Pro Bowl selections in his three seasons in Cincinnati.

Gruden was tasked with the development of quarterback Andy Dalton, a 2011 second-round pick. In three seasons together, Gruden helped Dalton to a 30-18 regular season record as a starter (.625), as Dalton's 30 wins in that time frame ranked tied for fifth-most among NFL quarterbacks. Dalton's 80 passing touchdowns ranked third-most in NFL history for a quarterback in his first three seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (98) and Peyton Manning (85).

Prior to joining the Bengals, Gruden served two years with the Florida Tuskers of the United Football League from 2009-10. In 2009, Gruden served as offensive coordinator as the Tuskers compiled a 6-0 regular season record and earned a UFL championship game berth. In 2010, he assumed the roles of head coach and general manager and led the Tuskers to their second consecutive championship game appearance.

Gruden coached for seven seasons (2002-08) with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, earning a Super Bowl championship ring as an offensive assistant in 2002. There he worked under his brother, Jon (then the Bucs' head coach), and current Redskins President Bruce Allen (the Bucs' general manager from 2004-08). Gruden helped guide the Buccaneers to the team's first championship, a 48-21 victory in Super Bowl XXXVII.

Gruden also ranks among the most outstanding players and coaches in the history of the Arena Football League, having won six combined league championships — four as a quarterback and two as a head coach. Gruden played quarterback (2002-03) and served as head coach (2004-08) of the AFL's Orlando Predators while simultaneously working as an offensive assistant with the Buccaneers. In all, Gruden served as head coach of the Predators for nine seasons (1998-2001 and 2004-08), leading the Predators to four championship game appearances and two league titles as a coach. During a two-year hiatus from coaching the Predators in 2002-03, he returned to the playing field as Orlando's quarterback, leading the Predators to playoff appearances in both seasons.

In his eight seasons as a player in the AFL, Gruden completed 1,673-of-2,775 passes (60.3 percent) for 21,578 yards with 398 touchdowns and 99 interceptions. In addition to his time with Orlando, he spent six seasons (1991-96) at quarterback for the Tampa Bay Storm, winning four AFL titles and being named MVP of Arena Bowl VII in 1993. He was also named the 1992 AFL Most Valuable Player and was honored with induction into the AFL Hall of Fame in 1999.

Gruden played quarterback for four seasons for former Redskins draft pick Howard Schnellenberger at the University of Louisville (1985-88) and was a two-time team MVP.

Gruden was born March 4, 1967, in Tiffin, Ohio. He and his wife, Sherry, have three sons — J.J., Joey and Jack — and a grandson, Trey.

NOTES FROM LAST GAME

» The Washington Redskins defeated the Arizona Cardinals, 24-6, in front of an announced crowd of 61,613 people at State Farm Stadium on Sunday.

» The win snapped a five-game losing streak in season openers giving the Washington Redskins their first win to open the season in the Jay Gruden Era. The last time the Redskins opened the regular season with a victory was September 9, 2012. Washington defeated the New Orleans Saints on the road, 40-32.

» The Redskins are now 76-46-2 against the Cardinals all-time with all games played during the regular season.

» The Redskins move their all-time record in season openers to 41-42-4 including a 25-24 mark since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger.

» The Redskins now hold a 28-26-2 record in their all-time regular season series against Arizona on the road.

» The Redskins recorded their first Week 1 victory over the Cardinals since defeating Arizona in Week 1 at FedExField on Sept. 8, 2002.

» The Redskins have now defeated the Cardinals in consecutive meetings for the first time since recording wins over Arizona during the 2008 and 2011 regular seasons » Including a victory in their road openers the last two seasons, the Redskins have now earned victories in their first road game of three consecutive seasons for the first time since 1978-80.

» The Redskins totaled 429 net yards (5.7 avg.) on offense surpassing the 400-yard mark for the first time since recording 456 yards of offense on Nov. 19, 2017 at New Orleans. The last time the Redskins opened a season with 400 or more yards of total offense was September 9, 2012 when Washington defeated the New Orleans Saints on the road, 40-32.

» The Redskins converted 30 first downs on the day, the first time that the team has converted 30 or more first downs in a single game since converting 30 against the Cincinnati Bengals October 30, 2016.

» The Redskins recorded 182 rushing yards (4.3 avg.). The output ranks ninth all-time in season openers and is the most since opening the 2015 season with 161 yards vs. the Miami Dolphins.

» Redskins held a 21-0 lead at the half. The last time Washington held a team scoreless in the first half was Sept. 24, 2017 against the Oakland Raiders at FedExField.

» The Redskins held the Cardinals to 68 yards rushing. It was the first time Washington held an opponent to under 75 rushing yards since holding the Oakland Raiders to 32 rushing yards on Sept. 24, 2017 at FedExField.

» Quarterback Alex Smith completed 21-of-30 passes for 255 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions for a passer rating of 118.1. Smith's passer rating of 118.1 ranks eighth all-time in Redskins history in Week 1 matchups and is the fourth best passer rating among Redskins quarterbacks making their first start with the team.

» • Running back Adrian Peterson finished the game with 96 rushing yards (3.7 avg.) on 26 carries and one touchdown. With his total rushing yards for the day, Peterson is now ranked 10th all-time in career rushing yards with 12,372 surpassing Jim Brown (12,312) and Marshall Faulk (12,279).

» On his first carry of the game with a five-yard run, Peterson surpassed Marshall Faulk for 11th all-time in career rushing yards.

» With 1:04 remaining in the first quarter, Peterson rushed for eight yards on the left side and surpassed Jim Brown for 10th for all-time career rushing yards.

» Peterson recorded his 100th career rushing touchdown passing Barry Sanders on the NFL's all-time for career rushing touchdowns. He is now currently tied with Shaun Alexander and Marshall Faulk for seventh all-time in NFL history.

» Peterson recorded two receptions for 70 yards, including a 52 yard reception in the fourth quarter. It was the third longest reception in Peterson's career.

» Running back Chris Thompson rushed for 65 yards (13.0 avg.) on five attempts and hauled in six receptions for 63 yards (10.5 avg.)

for one touchdown. It was Thompson's first touchdown since Nov. 19, 2017 at New Orleans. Thompson has now scored in consecutive games in which he has appeared.

» Peterson (166) and Thompson (128) were the first Redskins running back duo to each record 125 or more scrimmage yards in a single game since Clinton Portis (164) and Ladell Betts (151) accomplished this feat against the Houston Texans on Sept. 24, 2006.

» Tight end Jordan Reed hauled in four passes for 48 yards and a touchdown. The score marked the 23rd touchdown of Reed's career and the first time Reed has found the end zone since recording two touchdowns at the Philadelphia Eagles on Oct. 23, 2017.

» With his third reception of the game, Reed (279) passed Michael Westbrook (277) and moved to 10th in receptions on the Redskins all-time list.

» Wide receiver Jamison Crowder finished with three receptions for 32 yards. He now needs five catches for 200 career receptions.

» Wide receiver Paul Richardson Jr. recorded four receptions for 22 yards in his debut as a Washington Redskin. He is now one reception shy of 100 for his career.

» Offensive tackle Morgan Moses recorded his 49th consecutive start and the 50th overall start of his career.

» Linebacker Ryan Anderson recorded his first career sack after sacking Sam Bradford in the third quarter for a loss of four yards.

» Cornerback Quinton Dunbar recorded his fourth career interception after intercepting Sam Bradford in the third quarter. The last time Dunbar recorded an interception was on Oct. 23, 2017 at the Philadelphia Eagles.

» Defensive lineman Matt Ioannidis finished with one tackle, one sack for a loss of four yards, one forced fumble and his first career fumble recovery. Ioannidis now has 5.5 sacks and two forced fumbles for his career.

» Linebacker Ryan Kerrigan made his 114th consecutive start, the longest active streak among NFL linebackers. Kerrigan has started every game in his eight-year NFL career.

» Washington Redskin rookies DL Daron Payne, WR Trey Quinn, S Troy Apke, CB Greg Stroman, CB Danny Johnson, LB Shaun Dion Hamilton, WR Cam Sims and DL Tim Settle appeared in their first NFL regular season game.

» Payne made his first career start and recorded three tackles, including two solo (according to press box statistics).

» Quinn finished with two punt returns for 12 yards (6.0 avg.).

» Apke recorded one tackle on special teams (according to press box statistics).

THE OPPONENT

The Indianapolis Colts enter the game with an 0-1 record, after dropping their season opener against the Cincinnati Bengals, 34-23.

Head Coach Frank Reich leads the Colts in his first season at the helm, after serving as the offensive coordinator for the Super Bowl champion Philadelphia Eagles last season.

Quarterback Andrew Luck returns to lead the passing game after missing the entire 2017 season with a shoulder injury. Luck began his 2018 campaign completing 39-of-53 pass attempts with 319 yards passing, two touchdowns and one interception.

Rookie Jordan Wilkins made his NFL regular season debut against Cincinnati and led the team in rushing. Wilkins recorded 40 rushing yards on 14 attempts, and split rushing duties with rookie counterpart Nyheim Hines, who recorded 52 all-purpose yards.

Four-time Pro Bowl wide receiver T.Y. Hilton returned to the lineup to record five catches for 46 yards and a touchdown, while receiving passes from Andrew Luck for the first time since 2016.

The tight end position has played a key role for the Colts early on in the 2018 NFL season. Tight end Jack Doyle led the team with 60 receiving yards on seven receptions, while Eric Ebron added four catches for 51 yards and a touchdown against the Bengals.

A 2018 second round pick, Darius Leonard made his professional debut tallied a team high nine tackles, including six solo. Defensive end Margus Hunt tallied two sacks for a total of 14 yards lost, while totaling 3 tackles for loss combined.

Safety Clayton Geathers led the way for the Colts secondary, with seven solo tackles and a forced fumble in the losing effort. Cornerback Kenny Moore II recorded the team's first interception of the year and his career while safety Mathias Farley forced a fumble and added two tackles to his stat line.

NFL tenured kicker Adam Vinatieri started the year connecting 3-of-4 field goals, including one from 51 yards at the end of the 2nd quarter.

FRANK REICH

Reich joins the Colts as head coach for his first season after being signed to the post on February 11, 2018. He has 26 years of NFL experience as both a player (1985-1998) and a coach (2006-2017). Reich rejoins the Colts after spending six years on the team's coaching staff from 2006-2011.

Reich spent the last two seasons as offensive coordinator of the Philadelphia Eagles and was instrumental in the team's Super Bowl LII championship following the 2017 season.

Over the last two seasons, Reich assisted with the development of quarterback Carson Wentz, whom the team selected in the first round (second overall) of the 2016 NFL Draft.

The Eagles started the 2017 season in dominant fashion under the direction of Reich and his offense. Wentz started the first 13 games of the season, led the team to an 11-2 record and was in the running for NFL MVP after completing 265-of-440 passes for 3,296 yards with 33 touchdowns and only seven interceptions for a 101.9 passer rating. Philadelphia would face extreme adversity in a Week 14 contest at the Los Angeles Rams as Wentz suffered a season-ending knee injury toward the end of the third quarter.

Thrust into the spotlight for Wentz, who was leading the NFL in touchdown passes at the time of his injury, was veteran quarterback Nick Foles. Foles would start the final three contests of the regular season and guided the Eagles to a 2-1 record and a first-round bye in the playoffs.

Prior to Philadelphia, Reich spent three seasons (2013-15) with the San Diego Chargers, serving the last two seasons as offensive coordinator. Reich worked closely with quarterback Philip Rivers in San Diego. Under the direction of Reich, Rivers hit the 4,000-yard passing plateau in three-straight seasons for a total of 13,556 yards, marking the third-most passing yards by an NFL quarterback during that span. Also during that span, Rivers threw 92 touchdowns, the fourth-highest total in the NFL, while compiling the third-most completions in the league (1,194) and recording the second-highest completion percentage (67.3).

Before his tenure in San Diego, Reich coached wide receivers for the Arizona Cardinals in 2012, where he worked with wide receivers Larry Fitzgerald and Michael Floyd. Fitzgerald caught 71 passes for 798 yards and four touchdowns en route to his seventh career Pro Bowl selection. Reich spent the first six seasons (2006-2011) of his coaching career with the Colts as wide receivers coach (2011), quarterbacks coach (2009-2010), offensive assistant (2008) and coaching intern (2006-07). In Indianapolis, he was a member of teams that earned five playoff appearances, four AFC South Division titles, two AFC Championships, two Super Bowl appearances and one Super Bowl title.

In Indianapolis, he was a member of teams that earned five playoff appearances, four AFC South Division titles, two AFC Championships, two Super Bowl appearances and one Super Bowl title.

Reich enjoyed a 14-year playing career with the Buffalo Bills, Carolina Panthers, New York Jets and Detroit Lions after being selected by the Bills in the third round (57th overall) of the 1985 NFL Draft. Including postseason play, he played in 129 career games (22 starts) and completed 575-of-1,036 passes for 6,858 yards and 47 touchdowns.

A native of Freeport, N.Y., Reich played collegiately at the University of Maryland from 1981-84 where he backed up Boomer Esiason before earning the starting job as a senior in 1984.

LEADING THE FAN EXPERIENCE

In May, the Washington Redskins hired Brian Lafemina as the team's President of Business Operations and Chief Operating Officer.

In this newly created role, Lafemina will oversee all club business operations and report directly to Owner Dan Snyder.

"Nothing could have prepared me more for this role than working at the NFL," Lafemina said. "Dan first approached me about a year ago to discuss the possibility of me joining the Redskins. During that time, I was able to see first-hand his passion for the Redskins, the game of football and his deep commitment to the Washington, D.C. community. Working with Dan and Bruce Allen to develop a new dynamic stadium that matches the vibrancy of this organization and its fan base will be an exciting challenge and one of our top priorities. I would also be remiss if I didn't thank everyone I have worked with at the NFL, starting with Roger Goodell."

Lafemina spent eight years at the NFL, leading Club Business Development and building the team that works to create and share best practices across all of the NFL's 32 member clubs. During his tenure, the league saw significant growth in game day fan satisfaction, season ticket sales, suite sales, local sponsorship and media revenue. In addition, Lafemina led or played key roles in league-wide initiatives on fan experience, ticketing strategy, Super Bowl strategy, Pro Bowl strategy and stadium development.

"I am thrilled to welcome Brian to the Washington Redskins. Brian has been one of the most highly regarded NFL executives amongst league ownership for many years because of his deep understanding of our business, his focus on partner relationships and his genuine belief that fans must be at the center of every decision we make. Brian is coming to Washington with fresh thinking and big ideas to implement, and I have full confidence that with Brian's addition and with Bruce Allen continuing as team President, the Redskins' success will continue to grow, both on and off the field."

- Redskins Owner Daniel M. Snyder

Before joining the NFL, Lafemina spent 22 years at The Madison Square Garden Company in a variety of roles, starting as an intern and working his way up to Senior Vice President of Madison Square Garden Sports, where he was responsible for managing the business operations of the New York Knicks and New York Rangers.

Lafemina is a 1989 graduate of Rutgers University, where he earned his bachelor's degree in economics.

LAST MEETING

Colts 49, Redskins 27

Associated Press
Nov. 30, 2014

INDIANAPOLIS -- Andrew Luck showed everyone how franchise quarterbacks are supposed to play.

Robert Griffin III spent Sunday taking notes. The long-awaited showdown between the top two draft picks from 2012 was one-sided as Luck threw for 370 yards and a career-high five touchdowns, leading the Indianapolis Colts past Washington 49-27 with Griffin serving as the Redskins' backup.

"We were confident that we could hit some chunk [plays], as we say," Luck said after going 19 of 27. "I think that our tempo helped to get some drives together, but we came in thinking that we had a chance at some big ones."

Luck, who finished second to Griffin in voting for the 2011 Heisman Trophy and 2012 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year voting, delivered on another milestone day. He broke Peyton Manning's franchise record for most 300-yard games in one season. Luck has 10.

He also became the fifth NFL player since 1970 to win 30 regular-season games in a player's first three seasons, and joined the short list of players to throw for 4,000 yards in two of their first seasons, a club that previously included only Manning and Dan Marino.

Luck became the first quarterback in Colts history to throw two touchdown passes of 70-plus yards in the same game and the third Colts quarterback with 30 TD passes in a season, joining Manning and the late John Unitas.

And aside from turnovers on Indy's first two series, Luck was virtually flawless. He threw TD passes of 30, 3, 48, 73 and 79 yards, the longest of his career, answering every challenge Colt McCoy, Griffin's replacement, posed.

"I think the beauty of it is if you focus too much on the tight ends, there's wide receivers out there and running backs that are going to make you pay," Luck said after leading Indy (8-4) to its eighth win in 10 games.

McCoy started slowly but finished fast. He was 31 of 47 for a career-best 392 yards. His three TD passes were a career high -- and one more than Griffin had thrown all season. But Washington (3-9) still lost its fourth in a row.

Meanwhile, Griffin played loyal teammate. The No. 2 draft pick in 2012, behind Luck, spent the entire day on the sideline studying plays on his tablet, cheering on teammates, bemoaning mistakes and sometimes getting so close to the field he was instructed to move back. He didn't play and didn't take questions after the game.

Coach Jay Gruden, who made the quarterback switch Wednesday, said the Redskins must play better.

"Players have to start stepping up and taking some accountability at some point," he said. "We've got to do a better job coaching, that's all I can say. To have those guys wide open like that, it's unheard of on simple coverage calls. It's like a different guy, it seems, all the time."

Luck took advantage, and so did the other Colts. Daniel "Boom" Herron scored on a 49-yard run in the second quarter, and D'Qwell Jackson gave the Colts some breathing room midway through the third when he scooped up McCoy's fourth-down fumble and returned it 35 yards for the second touchdown of his career. That made it 35-17.

McCoy got the second-half shootout started by scrambling away from two tacklers and finding Logan Paulsen for a 16-yard TD pass to cut a 21-10 halftime deficit to 21-17. Three plays later, Luck found Donte Moncrief down the seam for a 48-yard TD.

After Jackson scored off of McCoy's fumble, McCoy answered with a 42-yard TD pass to DeSean Jackson.

Luck then hooked up with Coby Fleener, who broke Everette Brown's tackle and went 73 yards for the score to give Indy a 42-24 lead. Fleener finished with four catches for 127 yards and two TDs.

The Colts sealed it when Moncrief broke free down the middle again, taking Luck's long pass for a 79-yard score. Moncrief caught three passes for 134 yards.

2018 DRAFT RECAP

TEAM DRAFT NOTES

» Dating back to 2011, the Redskins have now selected at least seven players in eight consecutive drafts for the first time since the league adopted the seven-round format in 1994.

» Including their 10 selections in the 2017 NFL Draft, the Redskins have now selected eight or more players in back-to-back drafts for only the third time since the NFL adopted the seven-round format in 1994, including instances in 2011-12, 2014-15 and 2017-18.

» The Redskins made two trades during the draft. On Day 2, the Redskins sent the Nos. 44 and 142 overall picks to the San Francisco 49ers for the Nos. 59 and 74 overall selections. On Day 3, the team traded the Nos. 205 and 231 picks to the Los Angeles Rams for the Nos. 197 and 256 selections.

» Of the Redskins' eight selections, seven were made with picks acquired by trade, including draft-day trades with San Francisco (RB Derrius Guice and T Geron Christian) and the Los Angeles Rams (LB Shaun Dion Hamilton and WR Trey Quinn), an offseason trade with Denver (S Troy Apke and DL Tim Settle) and a 2017 preseason trade with the Rams (CB Greg Stroman).

» The Redskins' seven selections with picks acquired by trades are the team's most since 2011 (eight). The only player selected by Washington with one of the team's original picks was DL Daron Payne with the No. 13 overall selection.

» The Redskins have selected at least four players with picks acquired via trade in each of the last five drafts. It is the team's longest such stretch since a five-draft span from 1985-89.

» The Redskins selected two pairs of college teammates in the same draft for the first time since 2012.

» The Redskins have now selected at least one pair of college teammates in six of the last eight drafts (Nebraska's Roy Helu Jr., DeJon Gomes and Niles Paul in 2011; SMU's Josh LeRibeus and Richard Crawford and Iowa's Adam Gettis and Jordan Bernstine in 2012; Florida State's Chris Thompson and Brandon Jenkins in 2013; Arkansas' Martrell Spaight and Tevin Mitchell in 2015; Alabama's Jonathan Allen and Ryan Anderson in 2017; Alabama's Daron Payne and Shaun Dion Hamilton and Virginia Tech's Tim Settle and Greg Stroman in 2018).

» The 2018 NFL Draft marks the first time the Redskins have selected a pair of teammates out of Virginia Tech.

» The Redskins have now selected a pair of college teammates from the same school in back-to-back years for the first time since 1964-65, when the team selected a pair of teammates from Arizona State in both drafts. In those drafts, the Redskins selected Pro Football Hall of Fame HB/WR Charley Taylor and G John Seedborg from Arizona State in 1964, and then added legendary TE Jerry Smith and HB Dave Estrada from the same university in 1965.

» With four selections from the University of Alabama across the 2017-18 drafts, the Redskins selected at least four players from a single school in a two-year span for the first time since selecting T Mark Doak (No. 147 overall), DB Ardell Johnson (No. 277) and G Dennis Pavelka (No. 412) from Nebraska in 1975 and selecting Nebraska DE Dean Gissler (No. 308) in 1976.

» The Redskins made multiple picks in the seventh round for the third consecutive year, marking the team's first three-year stretch with multiple seventh-round picks since selecting at least two players in that round in each of the 2010-12 NFL Drafts.

» The Redskins selected five defensive players and have now picked at least five defensive players in consecutive drafts for the first time since 1989-90, when the draft consisted of 12 rounds.

» The Redskins have now selected at least one defensive lineman in each of the last three drafts (Matt Ioannidis in 2016, Jonathan Allen in 2017 and Daron Payne and Tim Settle in 2018). It marks the first time the team has taken a defensive lineman in three straight drafts since selecting one in each of the 2000-02 drafts, when all three selections were taken in sixth round or later (Del Cowsette in 2000, Mario Mondis in 2001 and Greg Scott in 2002).

» The last time the Redskins took a defensive lineman in the fifth round or earlier in three consecutive drafts was from 1991-93 (Bobby Wilson in 1991, Shane Collins in 1992 and Sterling Palmer in 1993).

» All eight of the Redskins' draft picks played their collegiate careers in the Football Bowl Subdivision, marking the sixth straight year the team's entire draft class had played at the FBS level. The last Redskins draft pick to play in the Football Championship Subdivision was South Dakota's Tom Compton (2012).

» Seven of the eight members of the Redskins' draft class played at schools in "Power Five" conferences.

» The Redskins selected three players from the Southeastern Conference, three players from the Atlantic Coast Conference, and one player each from the Big Ten and American Athletic Conferences. The SEC leads all conferences with 14 of the Redskins' 43 selections since 2014, followed by the ACC with 10 selections.

DL DARON PAYNE (RD. 1, NO. 13)

» Payne was the 467th selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 29th first-round selection in that time frame. He is the 60th first-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Payne's selection marks the second straight year in which the Redskins have selected a defensive player with their first selection of the draft (DL Jonathan Allen in 2017). The last time the Redskins selected defensive players with their first selection in consecutive drafts was in the 2013-14 drafts, in which the team selected CB David Amerson and LB Trent Murphy, respectively (both in the second round).

» With the first-round selections of Allen and Payne across the 2017-18 drafts, the Redskins have now selected a defensive player in the first round of consecutive drafts for the first time since 2004 (S Sean Taylor) and 2005 (CB Carlos Rogers).

» The selections of Payne and Allen – both University of Alabama products – in the first round of back-to-back years marks the first time the Redskins have selected players from the same school in the first round of consecutive drafts in the Common Draft era. It is the second such occurrence in the team's full draft history, including the selections of Oklahoma's George Thomas and Leon Heath in the 1950 and 1951 drafts, respectively.

» Payne and Allen became the first set of college teammates from the same position group selected by the same NFL franchise in consecutive first rounds since the San Francisco 49ers took Oregon defensive linemen Arik Armstead and DeForest Buckner in the 2015-16 drafts, respectively.

» Payne is the 10th defensive player selected by the Redskins in the first round since 1999, joining CB Champ Bailey (1999), LB LaVar Arrington (2000), S Sean Taylor (2004), CB Carlos Rogers (2005), S LaRon Landry (2007), DE/LB Brian Orakpo (2009), LB Ryan Kerrigan (2011) and DL Jonathan Allen (2017). Nine of the 10 defensive players selected by the Redskins in the first round in that time frame have earned at least one Pro Bowl selection during their career. The lone exception – Allen – was limited to five games by a season-ending Lisfranc injury as a rookie last year.

» Payne's selection marks the sixth time in the Common Draft era that the Redskins have selected a defensive lineman in the first round, joining Jonathan Allen (2017), Ryan Kerrigan (2011), Brian Orakpo (2009, transitioned to linebacker in 2010), Kenard Lang (1997) and Bobby Wilson (1991). The Redskins also selected Tracy Rucker (1989, third round), Markus Koch (1986, second round), Bob Slater (1984, second round), Duncan McColl (1977, fourth round) and Bill Brundige (1970, second round) with the team's first selections of each of the drafts listed.

» With the selections of Payne and Allen, the Redskins have now used first-round selections on defensive linemen in consecutive drafts for the first time in the Common Draft era.

» Payne is the 24th player from the University of Alabama selected by the Redskins all-time, joining B Riley Smith (1936), B Charley Holm (1939), E Sandy Sanford (1940), T Fred Davis (1941), G Ed Hickerson (1941), G Tony Leon (1943), B Bobby Jenkins (1945), T Fay Mills (1946), B Harry Gilmer (1948), B Lowell Tew (1948), T Dick Flowers (1949), E Ed White (1950), B Eddie Salem (1951), C Elliot Speed (1951), B Billy Hicks (1956), T Billy Neighbors (1962), E Tommy Brooker (1962), DB Steve Higginbotham (1972), DT Thomas Rayam (1990), T Chris Samuels (2000), G Arie Kouandjio (2015), DL Jonathan Allen (2017) and LB Ryan Anderson (2017).

» Payne's selection at No. 13 marks the fifth-highest the Redskins have selected a player from the University of Alabama, trailing B Harry Gilmer (No. 1 in 1948), B Riley Smith (No. 2 in 1936), T Chris Samuels (No. 3 in 2000) and B Lowell Tew (No. 4 in 1948).

» Payne is the eighth Southeastern Conference product selected by the Redskins in the first round in the Common Draft era. The Redskins have now selected an SEC product in the first round of consecutive drafts for the first time since 1999 (Georgia CB Champ Bailey) and 2000 (Alabama T Chris Samuels).

» Payne becomes the third player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 13 overall pick, joining FB Ray McDonald (1967) and DE/LB Brian Orakpo (2009).

RB DERRIUS GUICE (RD. 2, NO. 59)

» Guice was the 468th selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 38th second-round selection in that time frame. He is the 56th second-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Guice became the first offensive player selected by the Redskins in the second round since the team selected three offensive players in the second round of the 2008 NFL Draft.

ts with the No. 56 overall pick in 2002.

» Dating back to 2011, the Redskins have now selected a running back in eight consecutive drafts, the team's longest stretch since taking a running back in nine consecutive years across the 1983-91 drafts, which each consisted of 12 rounds.

» Guice becomes the first LSU product selected by the Redskins in the second round in franchise history. His selection marks the fourth-highest the Redskins have selected a player from LSU, trailing S LaRon Landry's selection at No. 6 overall in 2007, B Red Knight's selection at No. 17 overall in 1947 and B Dan Sandifer's selection at No. 28 overall in 1948.

» Including the selections DL Jonathan Allen and LB Ryan Anderson in 2017 and the selections of DL Da'Ron Payne and Guice in 2018, the Redskins have selected four players from the Southeastern Conference with their four most-recent first- and second-round picks. It marks the first time the Redskins have taken four players from the same conference with four consecutive first- or second-round picks in the Common Draft era.

» Guice becomes the sixth player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 59 overall pick, joining T Roy Young (1938), T Bob Hendren (1946), T Hank Harris (1947), B Gary Lowe (1956) and FB Jim Snowden (1964).

» Guice was selected with a pick acquired by the Redskins in a draft day trade in which the Redskins sent the Nos. 44 and 142 overall picks to San Francisco in exchange for the Nos. 59 and 75 overall selections. It marked the Redskins first selection using an acquired pick in the 2018 NFL Draft. The No. 59 overall selection originally belonged to the New Orleans Saints, who traded the pick to San Francisco during the 2017 NFL Draft for the right to select 2017 Offensive Rookie of the Year Alvin Kamara.

T GERON CHRISTIAN (RD. 3, NO. 74)

» Christian was the 469th selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 35th third-round selection in that time frame. He is the 65th third-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Christian became the first offensive lineman selected by the Redskins in the third round since the team selected two linemen – T Morgan Moses and G/C Spencer Long – in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft. Those two players combined to appear in 96 regular season games with 80 starts for the Redskins across the 2014-17 campaigns.

» Christian became the ninth offensive lineman selected by the Redskins in the first three rounds since 2000. Three of the offensive linemen selected in that timespan (Chris Samuels in 2000, Trent Williams in 2010 and Brandon Scherff in 2015) have combined for 14 career Pro Bowl appearances.

» Christian is the fifth player from Louisville selected by the Redskins all-time, joining T Ron Petty (1961), TE Jamie Asher (1995), LB Robert McCune (2005) and LB Josh Harvey-Clemons (2017).

» With Christian's selection in 2018 and the seventh-round selection of LB Josh Harvey-Clemons in 2017, the Redskins have now selected a Louisville product in consecutive drafts for the first time in team history.

» Christian became the first Louisville product selected by the Redskins in the third round in franchise history. His selection at No. 74 marks the highest the Redskins have selected a player from Louisville, surpassing TE Jamie Asher's No. 137 overall selection in the 1995 NFL Draft.

» Christian became the fourth player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 74 overall pick, joining G Marcel Saunders (1936), E Russ Brown (1964) and G Paul Siever (1992).

DB TROY APKE (RD. 4, NO. 109)

» Apke was the 470th selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 34th fourth-round selection in that time frame. He is the 49th fourth-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Apke's selection with the No. 109 overall pick marks the highest the Redskins have selected a safety since selecting LaRon Landry with the No. 6 overall pick in the 2007 NFL Draft. (Note: Su'a Cravens was initially selected as a linebacker with the No. 53 overall pick in 2016).

» Apke became the second safety selected by the Redskins in the fourth round in the past two years after the team selected Montae Nicholson with the No. 123 overall pick in the 2017 NFL Draft. Apke and Nicholson are both natives of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, as Apke played his high school career at Mt. Lebanon High School and Nicholson completed his prep career at Gateway High School, approximately 25 miles away.

» The 2017-18 drafts mark the Redskins' first time selecting the same position in the fourth round in back-to-back years since selecting linebackers Shawn Barber and Nate Stimson in the fourth round of the 1998 and 1999 NFL Drafts, respectively.

» Apke was the 22nd Penn State product selected by the Redskins all-time, joining G Johnny Jaffurs (1943), B Joe Colone (1947), B Don Bailey (1955), E Jack Faris (1958), QB Richie Lucas (1960), T Andy Stynchula (1960), G Earl Kohlhaas (1960), B Jim Kerr (1961), E Bob Mitinger (1962), B Ton Urbanik (1964), DB Paul Johnson (1970), LB James Kates (1970), LB Rich Milot (1979), LB Larry Kubin (1981), LB Andre Collins (1990), G Paul Siever (1992), WR Terry Smith (1992), C Greg Huntington (1993), T Andre Johnson (1996), LB LaVar Arrington (2000) and RB Evan Royster (2011).

» Penn State's 22 all-time selections by the Redskins are the fourth-most of any program, trailing Notre Dame (34), USC (30) and Alabama (24). Their 12 selections by the Redskins in the Common Draft era are tied with Nebraska for the most in that timeframe.

» Apke became the first defensive player from Penn State selected by the Redskins since selecting three-time Pro Bowl linebacker LaVar Arrington with the No. 2 overall pick in the 2000 NFL Draft.

» Apke becomes the sixth player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 109 overall pick, joining G Henry Bartos (1938), T Monte Moncrief (1946), RB Jamie Morris (1988), DB Rico Labbe (1990) and QB Sage Rosenfels (2001).

DL TIM SETTLE (RD. 5, NO. 163)

» Settle was the 471st selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 49th fifth-round selection in that time frame. He is the 74th fifth-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Settle was the second defensive lineman selected by the Redskins in the fifth round in the past three drafts. The team selected DL Matt Ioannidis with the No. 152 overall pick in the 2016 NFL Draft.

» With the selection of Settle and the first-round selection of DL Da'Ron Payne, the Redskins have now selected two defensive linemen in the same draft for the first time since selecting Anthony Montgomery and Kedric Golston in the 2006 NFL Draft.

» Settle played his prep career at Stonewall Jackson H.S. in Manassas, Va., approximately 25 miles from team headquarters in Ashburn, Va. Including the selection of Stone Bridge H.S.'s Jonathan Allen last year, the Redskins have now selected players from the Northern Virginia metro area in back-to-back drafts.

» Settle was the seventh Virginia Tech product selected by the Redskins all-time, joining C Buzz Nutter (1953), E Tom Petty (1955), TE Ken Barefoot (1968), T Derek Smith (1999), DB Kyshoen Jarrett (2015) and CB Kendall Fuller (2016).

» Settle became the third Virginia Tech product selected by the Redskins in the last four drafts, with all three picks coming on the defensive side of the ball.

» Settle became the fourth player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 163 overall pick, joining T Doug Conaway (1952), TE Danzell Lee (1985) and DE Dexter Nottage (1994).

LB SHAUN DION HAMILTON (RD. 6, 197)

» Hamilton was the 472nd selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 57th sixth-round selection in that time frame. He is the 83rd sixth-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Hamilton was the second linebacker from Alabama selected by the Redskins in the last two drafts, joining LB Ryan Anderson (No. 49 overall in 2017). Including the selections of DL Jonathan Allen and DL Da'Ron Payne in the 2017 and 2018 drafts, respectively, the Redskins have now selected a defensive lineman and linebacker from Alabama in back-to-back drafts.

» Hamilton was the 25th player from the University of Alabama selected by the Redskins all-time, joining B Riley Smith (1936), B Charley Holm (1939), E Sandy Sanford (1940), T Fred Davis (1941), G Ed Hickerson (1941), G Tony Leon (1943), B Bobby Jenkins (1945), T Fay Mills (1946), B Harry Gilmer (1948), B Lowell Tew (1948), T Dick Flowers (1949), E Ed White (1950), B Eddie Salem (1951), C Elliot Speed (1951), B Billy Hicks (1956), T Billy Neighbors (1962), E Tommy Brooker (1962), DB Steve Higginbotham (1972), DT Thomas Rayam (1990), T Chris Samuels (2000), G Arie Kouandjio (2015), DL Jonathan Allen (2017), LB Ryan Anderson (2017) and DL Da'Ron Payne (2018).

» Alabama's 25 all-time selections by the Redskins are third-most from any school in franchise history, trailing only Notre Dame (34) and USC (30).

» Hamilton becomes the third player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 197 overall pick, joining T Len Vella (1962) and QB Gus Frerotte (1994).

DB GREG STROMAN (RD. 7, NO. 241)

» Stroman was the 473rd selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 62nd seventh-round selection in that time frame. He is the 93rd seventh-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Stroman was the eighth Virginia Tech product selected by the Redskins all-time, joining C Buzz Nutter (1953), E Tom Petty (1955), TE Ken Barefoot (1968), T Derek Smith (1999), DB Kyshoen Jarrett (2015), CB Kendall Fuller (2016) and DL Tim Settle (2018).

» With Stroman's selection, the Redskins selected teammates from Virginia Tech in a single draft for the first time in team history.

» In addition to playing collegiately with fifth-round pick Tim Settle, Stroman played his prep career with Settle at Stonewall Jackson H.S. in Manassas, Va., approximately 25 miles from team headquarters in Ashburn, Va.

» Stroman was the third Virginia Tech defensive back selected by the Redskins in the last four drafts, joining the selections of DB Kyshoen Jarrett (2015) and CB Kendall Fuller (2016).

» The Redskins have now selected a cornerback in the seventh round in back-to-back years, including the selection of Joshua Holsey in 2017.

» Stroman becomes the third player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 241 overall pick, joining T George Tolford (1961) and WR Lawrence McCullough (1980).

WR TREY QUINN (RD. 7, NO. 256)

» Quinn was the 474th selection made by the Redskins in the Common Draft era (since 1967) and the 63rd seventh-round selection in that time frame. He is the 94th seventh-round selection by the Redskins all-time since the institution of the draft in 1936.

» Quinn was selected with the final pick of the 2018 NFL Draft, a selection now known as “Mr. Irrelevant.” The nomenclature began in 1976, and is part of “Irrelevant Week,” described thusly by the organizers’ website: “Over the past 40 years, Irrelevant Week has become a much-anticipated and beloved celebration honoring football’s underdog, while also making charitable contributions to the community. Through Irrelevant Week, the organization has donated more than $1 million to charities over the past three decades. Previous beneficiaries include the American Cancer Society, Big Brothers Big Sisters, Goodwill Industries, YMCA, Special Olympics, Habitat for Humanity, NFL Alumni, and the American Red Cross, among others.”

» Quinn was the second member of the Redskins to be tabbed as Mr. Irrelevant since its inception in 1976, joining Nebraska C Matt Elliott (1992). The Redskins also selected G Bo Bogovich with the last pick of the 1943 NFL Draft prior to the adoption of the pick’s nickname in 1976.

» Quinn was the eighth SMU product selected by the Redskins all-time, joining T Sid Halliday (1945), E Gabby Martin (1945), C Dick Hightower (1952), E Ben White (1952), WR Aldrick Robinson (2011), G Josh LeRibeus (2012) and CB Richard Crawford (2012).

» The Redskins selected a total of four SMU products from 1936-2010, including two selections from the school in each of the 1945 and 1952 NFL Drafts. Including Quinn, the Redskins have now selected four SMU products in the last eight drafts since 2011.

» Quinn became the second player selected by the Redskins all-time with the No. 256 overall pick, joining G Ed Pucci (1953).

2018 SUPPLEMENTAL DRAFT RECAP

CB ADONIS ALEXANDER (RD. 6)

» Alexander was the fifth selection made by the Redskins from the Supplemental Draft (since 1977) and the first sixth-round selection in that time frame.

» Including the NFL Draft and Supplemental Draft, Alexander was the ninth Virginia Tech product selected by the Redskins all-time, joining C Buzz Nutter (1953), E Tom Petty (1955), TE Ken Barefoot (1968), T Derek Smith (1999), DB Kyshoen Jarrett (2015), CB Kendall Fuller (2016), DL Tim Settle (2018) and CB Greg Stroman (2018).

» With Alexander’s selection, the Redskins selected teammates from Virginia Tech in a single draft year for the first time in team history.

» Including combined picks in the NFL Draft and Supplemental Draft, Alexander was the fourth Virginia Tech defensive back selected joining the selections of DB Kyshoen Jarrett (2015), CB Kendall Fuller (2016), Greg Stroman (2018) from the NFL Draft.

» The Redskins have now selected a cornerback for the first time in the Supplemental Draft. Alexander becomes the second player from the college ranks and second defensive player selected joining DE Jeremy Jarmon (2009).

» With the selection of Alexander in the Supplemental Draft and the selection of his Virginia Tech teammates DL Tim Settle and CB Greg Stroman in the NFL Draft, the Redskins have now selected at least three players from the same school for the 12th time since 1936. The last time the Redskins selected three college teammates in the same draft was 2011 when Washington selected RB Roy Helu, S DeJon Gomes and WR Niles Paul from Nebraska with consecutive picks in the NFL Draft.

» With the selection of Alexander in the Supplemental Draft and the selection of his Virginia Tech teammates DL Tim Settle and CB Greg Stroman in the NFL Draft, marks the first time that all three players picked in the same draft year played on the same defensive unit in college before becoming eligible for either draft.

TRENDING FROM 2017

TOUCHDOWN STREAK

Since being held without a touchdown in a shutout loss to the St. Louis Rams on Dec. 7, 2014, the Redskins have embarked upon one of their most prolific touchdown streaks in team history.

The Redskins have scored a touchdown in 53 consecutive games, including postseason play, the third-longest streak in franchise history. It's the NFL's second-longest active streak.

CONSECUTIVE GAMES WITH A TOUCHDOWN (INCLUDING POSTSEASON PLAY, REDSKINS HISTORY):

Streak Start/End	Games
1. Week 12 [1995] – Week 15 [2000]	86
2. Week 12 [1961] – Week 10 [1966]	69

KICKOFF COVERAGE

The Redskins ranked second in the NFL in kickoff return average allowed (18.7 yards per return) in 2017, finishing in the Top 5 in the NFL in kickoff coverage for the eighth time in a 12-year span (2006-11, 2015, 2017). The Redskins' eight Top 5 finishes in kickoff return average allowed from 2006-17 are by far the most in the NFL, with no other franchise accounting for more than five in that span.

TOP 5 FINISHES, KICKOFF RETURN AVERAGE ALLOWED (SINCE 2006):

Team	Top 5 Finishes
1. Washington Redskins	8
2t. Buffalo Bills	5
2t. Chicago Bears	5
2t. New England Patriots	5
2t. Tampa Bay Buccaneers	5

YARDS AFTER CATCH

The Redskins' passing offense has flourished in recent seasons by getting the ball to their playmakers with space to create after the catch. The Redskins ranked fourth in the NFL in yards after catch in 2017.

YARDS AFTER CATCH (2017):

Team	YAC
1. New Orleans Saints	2,359
2. Pittsburgh Steelers	2,178
3. Los Angeles Chargers	2,150
4. Washington Redskins	2,140
5. Kansas City Chiefs	2,134

Of Washington's 4,093 passing yards in 2017, 52.3 percent came following catches, the third-highest percentage in the NFL.

PCT. OF PASSING YARDS GAINED AFTER THE CATCH (2017):

STRENGTH OF SCHEDULE

The Redskins tied for the NFL's fifth-toughest strength of schedule in 2017 as measured by the combined winning percentage of opponents. Washington's strength of schedule had been the league's most difficult prior to the team's season finale in Week 17.

COMBINED WINNING PERCENTAGE OF OPPONENTS [NFL, 2017]:

Team	Opp. Win Pct. (Wins)
1. Chicago Bears	.559 (143)

DIVISION PARITY

Parity has been a topic de jour in recent years, and the league-wide trends provide the evidence. Each year since the 12-team playoff format was adopted in 1990, at least four teams have qualified for the playoffs after missing the postseason the year before. Through 2017, the NFC East and the AFC West are the only divisions to have all four teams earn at least one division title since 2011.

13 YEARS, NO NFC EAST REPEATS

No division has been more hotly contested in this era than the NFC East, as the 2017 season marked the division's 13th consecutive campaign without a repeat champion, easily the league's longest stretch. No other division has gone more than three years since their last repeat champion.

STARTING STRONG

From Weeks 2-8, the Redskins scored points on their first possession of six consecutive games for the first time since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger. The stretch helped the Redskins rank fifth in the NFL in points scored on opening possessions in 2017.

POINTS ON FIRST OFFENSIVE POSSESSION (NFL, 2017):

Team	TD	FG	Points
1t. Green Bay Packers	7	2	54
1t. New England Patriots	7	2	54
3t. Los Angeles Rams	5	6	53

9. Minnesota Vikings	5	2	40
10. Jacksonville Jaguars	4	3	37

Conversely, the Redskins' defense surrendered only 17 points on teams' opening drives in 2017. In Week 10, the Redskins allowed a touchdown on Minnesota's opening drive, snapping a streak of seven straight games without allowing any opening-possession points, the team's longest since the final seven games of the 2007 season. Prior to the drive, Washington had not surrendered any opening-drive points to opponents since allowing an opening drive touchdown in Week 1.

Below is a breakdown of how opponents fared against Washington on their opening possessions in 2017 by game. The Redskins rank tied for second in the NFL in number of scoring drives allowed on opponents' first possessions (four).

OPPONENTS' FIRST OFFENSIVE POSSESSIONS (REDSKINS, 2017):

In Week 8, the Redskins opened their game against the Cowboys by forcing and recovering a fumble on Dallas' first play from scrimmage. It marked the 10th time since 2000 that the Redskins have earned a takeaway on their opponent's first play from scrimmage.

FLIGHT MARSHALS

In 2016, the Redskins made a major splash in their secondary, adding free agent Josh Norman to the group. A year later, the unit found additional leadership in both the coaching and player ranks.

In January of 2017, the Redskins named Torrian Gray as the team's Defensive Backs Coach after he spent the previous 11 seasons producing NFL defensive backs at Virginia Tech (2006-15) and Florida (2016). Two months later, the Redskins signed safety D.J. Swearinger on the first day of unrestricted free agency. Swearinger's swagger and Gray's emphasis on technique brought new life to a unit that has dubbed itself the "Flight Marshals."

"We control everything in the air, man," Swearinger told The Washington Post. "Like we say, man, we're going to get on this flight, it's going to be a long flight, we're going to keep everybody in their seat belts and we're going to keep the red light on. The wide receivers, you gotta stay in your seat belt."

The unit's signature celebration was on display against the 49ers in Week 6. After a game-sealing interception with three seconds remaining, Swearinger and his Flight Marshal teammates mimed a security screening/frisking.

No matter the nickname, Swearinger's impact has been immediately felt by Redskins coaches and players. He was named the team's defensive captain prior to ever stepping foot on the field for the Redskins in a regular season game. It was proof that Swearinger's teammates believed he could back up his reputation for trash talk with a reputation for stellar play.

"It's one thing being a vocal guy, but you have to back it up with production and sound play and know what you are talking about. I've had guys before that are talkers that don't know what they are doing, but he brings both," Head Coach Jay Gruden said. "He brings an edge to him that rubs off on people."

While Swearinger and Norman — former high school teammates in Greenwood, S.C. — account for most of the spotlight and the volume among the group, the Redskins had a number of young players make important contributions in the secondary in 2017. Receiver-convert Quinton Dunbar was called upon to start in place of an injured Norman and registered a couple of critical passes defended in a win over San Francisco in Week 6. Rookie safety Montae Nicholson announced his presence in a big way in Week 3, intercepting Raiders quarterback Derek Carr on the game's first possession and later leveling and knocking wide receiver Michael Crabtree out of the game with a legal hit.

Collectively, the unit held passers to an 81.0 rating in 2017, the lowest allowed by the Redskins since 2008 (75.6). The Redskins ranked 10th in opposing passer rating, finishing in the top half in the NFL and in the Top 10 in the category for the first time since 2008.

OPPONENT PASSER RATING, REDSKINS, LAST 10 YEARS:

Year	Opp. Rtg.	NFL Rank	NFC Rank
2017 Redskins	81.0	10	6
2016 Redskins	91.1	20	7
2015 Redskins	96.1	22	11
2014 Redskins	108.3	32	16
2013 Redskins	96.1	27	14
2012 Redskins	87.0	18	8
2011 Redskins	87.4	24	12
2010 Redskins	89.6	24	13
2009 Redskins	85.7	18	8
2008 Redskins	75.6	7	4

Opponents completed only 57.6 percent of passes against the Redskins, the lowest completion percentage allowed by the Redskins since 2008 (56.8). It snapped an eight-year streak in which opponents completed at least 60 percent of passes in each season.

The Redskins ranked third in the NFL in lowest completion percentage allowed in 2017, the team's best ranking since leading the NFL in the category in 2005 (54.4 percent).

WEEK 3: RAIDER ROUT

Prior to their meeting with the Redskins on Sunday Night Football in Week 3, the Oakland Raiders were one of the toasts of the NFL through the first two weeks of the 2017 season. They entered the contest ranked first in the NFL in points per game, second in yards per play, third in third down percentage and fourth in yards per game while entering the night as one of eight undefeated teams in the NFL.

The Redskins categorically and systematically dismantled the Raiders, earning a 27-10 victory in front of the nation's eyes. The Redskins outgained the Raiders, 472-128. Washington's 344-yard differential was its largest in regular season play since a 385-yard advantage against the Chicago Bears on Dec. 15, 1974, a span of 660 regular season games.

Included below are the Redskins' largest single-game yardage differentials in records available dating back to 1950:

LARGEST YARDAGE DIFFERENTIALS

(REDSKINS IN REGULAR SEASON SINCE 1950):

Game Date	Opp.	Yds. For	Yds. All.	+/-

The Redskins held the Raiders to 128 total yards. It was Washington's fifth game allowing 130 or fewer net yards since the 1970 merger and its first since 1992.

130 OR FEWER NET YARDS ALLOWED

9/24/2017	vs. Oakland	128	32	96

The Redskins tied a team record by limiting the Raiders to 0-of-11 on third downs. It marked the third time since 1991 that the Redskins have held an opponent without a third down conversion.

NO THIRD DOWN CONVERSIONS ALLOWED

(REDSKINS, RECORDS DATING BACK TO 1991):

The Redskins threw for 356 net passing yards in the contest, 150 of which were caught by running back Chris Thompson. Thompson, whom Head Coach Jay Gruden calls the best third-down back in the NFL, surpassed the 140 receiving yards accrued by running back Dick James in a 1962 contest against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

WEEK 2: GROUND AND POUND

Following a season debut in which the Philadelphia Eagles limited the Redskins to 64 rushing yards on 17 carries, the Redskins' offense entered Week 2 with something to prove about its running game.

One win and 229 rushing yards later, the Redskins hoped their performance against the Los Angeles Rams was a subtle statement. The team recorded its first 200-yard rushing effort since Week 16 of the 2016 season at Chicago, and the 229 yards were the second-most by the Redskins under Head Coach Jay Gruden, trailing only Week 6 of the 2016 season vs. Philadelphia [230].

The game was the Redskins' 21st 200-yard rushing game since 2000:

According to the Elias Sports Bureau, with the efforts by running backs Rob Kelley (78 yards), Chris Thompson (77) and Samaje Perine (67) against the Rams, the Redskins had three different players reach 65 rushing yards in a single game for the first time since Dec. 1, 1957, against the Chicago Bears (Ed Sutton, 72; Jim Podoley, 71; Don Bosseler, 68).

ALEX SMITH

The Washington Redskins ignited the NFL offseason talks after acquiring Alex Smith via trade with the Kansas City Chiefs on March 14, 2018.

Smith made his Redskins regular season debut at Arizona and led the team to a 24-6 victory at State Farm Stadium in Glendale, Ariz. He finished the game 21-for-30 with 255 yards and two touchdowns. Smith's passer rating of 118.1 ranks eighth all-time in Redskins history in Week 1 matchups and is the fourth best passer rating among Redskins quarterbacks making their first start with the team.

"Yeah, he did a great job, both on schedule and off schedule. That's kind of the MO of his career," said Gruden. "He does a great job of managing the game, keeping us out of negative down and distance and negative plays. He does a great job of extending plays from time to time also, so couldn't be more excited about his performance and moving forward, I think there's a lot to build on there."

"...we came up with Alex Smith, but we had to find a way to get it done. And it wasn't easy because there were a few teams in it that wanted Alex Smith. He chose us and he chose us for a reason. It's because who we are, the legacy of the Washington Redskins, the history of the Washington Redskins."

- Senior Vice President of Player Personnel Doug Williams

Smith captured his fourth consecutive win in season openers while helping the Redskins snap a five-game skid in Week 1 matchups. He moved his record to 8-3 when opening the season as the starting signal caller.

Smith's reputation for limiting turnovers was one of the highlights in the win over the Cardinals in Week 1. He has not thrown an interception in 91 of 157 career games.

ADRIAN PETERSON

“We’re fortunate that he was on the streets and he had a great workout – hats off to him for staying in great shape, really. A lot of guys can tank it and not workout, but he was in great physical condition and he showed it on Sunday, being able to carry the ball as many times as he did without wilting. He actually got stronger as the game went on.”

- Head Coach Jay Gruden

CAREER SCRIMMAGE YARDS

Among active players, Adrian Peterson has recorded the third most scrimmage yards in the league.

Player	Yards
1. Frank Gore	17,759
2. Larry Fitzgerald	15,689
3. Adrian Peterson	14,457
4. LeSean McCoy	13,491
5. Brandon Marshall	12,379

The Washington Redskins bolstered their depth at the running back position by signing seven-time Pro Bowler Adrian Peterson on Aug. 20 after losing second round pick Derrius Guice to a torn ACL in the first preseason game.

Peterson impressed during his workout and in his performance in the preseason and carried that over to the regular season opener. Against the Cardinals in Week 1, Peterson rushed for 96 yards on 26 carries and caught two passes for 70 yards, including a 52 yard reception that was the third longest of his career. He was also the only player in Week 1 to lead a team in both rushing and receiving.

“Some of the backs we had in here [for the workout] were huffing and puffing, keeling over and he’s standing straight up,” said Gruden. “He could have gone for another two hours. That played mostly into it -- his great physical condition.”

Peterson has amassed 12,372 rushing yards on 2,600 attempts (4.8 avg.) and 100 touchdowns in 134 career games. He has started in 124 of the 134 games he has appeared in. Peterson has also registered 254 receptions for 2,085 yards and five touchdowns through the air.

He has been selected to seven Pro Bowls and was the 2012 NFL MVP after finishing second all-time in rushing yards for a single season (2,097). The 12th-year pro currently ranks third all-time in yards per game (92.3), is tied for seventh all-time in rushing touchdowns (100) and is tenth in rushing yards (12,372).

Peterson spent last season with the New Orleans Saints and Arizona Cardinals and finished the season with 529 rushing yards on 156 carries (3.4 avg.) and two touchdowns in 10 games.

CHRIS THOMPSON

Late in the 2017 preseason, Head Coach Jay Gruden was asked about running back Chris Thompson's value to the Washington offense.

"He's a very valuable commodity to our football team, both in pass protection and getting out on the routes," Gruden said. "I mean, the thought of him not being around scares the heck out of me."

Though an injury sidelined Thompson for the final six games of the 2016 regular season, Gruden could worry no more as it pertained to Thompson's contract. The Redskins signed Thompson to a multi-year contract extension in Week 1 of the 2017 season, locking up the third-down back that Gruden considers the best in the NFL.

"When you're talking about third downs, that's the most important down in football. There's nobody better as a third-down back in my opinion than Chris."

- Head Coach Jay Gruden on RB Chris Thompson

Dubbed the "Chris Army Knife" by some fans for his ability to run, catch and block, Thompson's story has been one of perseverance. At Florida State, two broken vetebræ ended his 2011 season and a knee injury ended his 2012 campaign. Shoulder surgery cut his 2013 rookie season in Washington short, and he spent the majority of the 2014 season on the team's practice squad.

But Thompson's role has blossomed in recent years. Early in 2017, Thompson has picked up where he left off in 2016. He scored the Redskins' first offensive points of the season in Week 1, pinballing off Philadelphia defenders for a 29-yard receiving touchdown. He followed that performance up with a career day in Los Angeles, rushing three times and posting career highs in rushing yards (77) and rushing touchdowns (two, including a 61-yarder) against the Rams. His 25.7-yard rushing average in the contest was the best by a member of the Redskins with at least three carries in a game in records available dating back to 1960.

One week later, Thompson was the focal point of the Redskins' aerial assault in a 27-10 drubbing of the Oakland Raiders, gaining 150 yards on six receptions and contributing another 38 yards on eight rushing attempts. His 188 yards from scrimmage were the most by any member of the Redskins since Alfred Morris on Dec. 30, 2012 vs. Dallas (212, including 200 rushing and 12 receiving). In Week 6, he became only the second Redskins running back since 1960 to record multiple 100-yard games through the air in a single season (Dick James, 1962).

"It's great that you see the hard work pay off for somebody like Chris," Gruden said. "He's such a great kid off the field. You want to see him succeed in the worst way because he does everything exactly right the way you ask him. In practice, he takes all the reps, he works hard, never takes a play off. He's never been late one time to a meeting or a workout. He's a coach's dream, quite frankly."

Though the team often rations his touches, Thompson has become one of the most efficient running backs in the NFL with the ball in his hands. Thompson's 6.7 yards per touch rank second among active NFL running backs with at least 200 career offensive touches.

CAREER YARDS PER OFFENSIVE TOUCH [ACTIVE NFL RUNNING BACKS, MIN. 200 TOUCHES]:

4. Darren Sproles	1227	8,054	6.6
5. Duke Johnson Jr.	553	2,851	6.3

2017 THOMPSON TIDBITS

** Thompson recorded only the sixth season in franchise history with at least 275 rushing yards and at least 500 receiving yards, joining Jim Podoley (1957), Charley Taylor (1964 and 1965), Clarence Harmon (1980), Joe Washington (1981).

** Thompson was one of six NFL players with at least 275 rushing yards and at least 500 receiving yards in 2017, joining Todd Gurley II, Le'Veon Bell, Alvin Kamara, Christian McCaffrey and Duke Johnson Jr. Thompson accomplished the feat in 10 games, while the other five players all appeared in at least 15 games.

** Before a Week 11 contest in which he suffered a season-ending injury, Thompson led the Redskins in both rushing and receiving yards, the only player in the NFL at the time to lead a team in both categories.

** Thompson's 510 receiving yards were 10th-most by a running back in a season in franchise history and the most since fullback Larry Centers in 2000 (600).

** Thompson led all NFL running backs (min. 30 receptions) with 13.1 yards per catch in 2017, joining Larry Brown (14.2 in 1972), Clarence Harmon (13.6 in 1979) and Roy Helu Jr. (11.4 in 2014) as the only Redskins running backs to lead the league in the category since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger.

** Thompson's receiving average was the best by a qualified Redskins running back since Clarence Harmon (13.6) in 1979.

** Thompson's 13.1 yards-per-catch average was the highest by any NFL running back with at least 35 receptions since San Francisco's Garrison Hearst in 1998 (13.7).

** Thompson accrued 804 scrimmage yards on 103 combined offensive touches, averaging 7.8 scrimmage yards per touch. His 7.8-yard average was the best among qualified players in team history since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger. The mark is the fifth-best in team history dating back to the franchise's inception in 1932, trailing only Steve Bagarus (10.6 in 1945), Eddie Saenz (8.7 in 1947) and Dick Todd (8.4 in 1940 and 8.0 in 1948).

JORDAN REED

In recent seasons, Redskins players have often extolled the ability of tight end Jordan Reed to anyone who will listen.

“As I’ve said before and said every week, I don’t know anybody who can guard that young man. When he’s on, he’s on, and it’s tough to stop. He’s the best receiving tight end in the NFL, hands down.”

- Five-time Pro Bowl tackle Trent Williams on Jordan Reed in 2015, as told to Master Tesfatsion of The Washington Post

The NFL officially took notice in 2016 when Reed earned his first career Pro Bowl selection, the first by a Redskins tight end since Chris Cooley in 2008. Reed joined Cooley (2007-08), Stephen Alexander (2000), Jean Fugett (1977) and Jerry Smith (1967 and 1969) as the only Redskins tight ends to earn Pro Bowl honors since the game’s inception in 1950.

Despite being limited by injury to only 12 games with eight starts in 2016, the ex-college-quarterback recorded 66 receptions for 686 yards with six receiving touchdowns. A year earlier, he compiled arguably the greatest season by a tight end in franchise history. During the 2015 regular season, Reed recorded 87 receptions for 952 yards (both team records for a tight end) with 11 receiving touchdowns, becoming the first tight end to lead the Redskins in all three categories since Fugett in 1977.

“He was a puppy when he came in here physically; now he’s filling out and he’s a bigger guy. He’s playing with a ton of confidence,” Head Coach Jay Gruden said in 2016. “We can move him around and do a lot of different things with him. He’s a smart player. He can see coverages, he can work off leverage of the defenders, he’s got big strong hands and he’s excellent after the catch. Really, the sky is the limit for Jordan. I have all of the confidence in the world that when the ball is thrown to him, he’s going to be in the right spot and make the catch. And he can beat a lot of people. He’s getting better and better, more and more confident and he’s blocking better, too. He’s a heck of a player, no doubt.”

In 52 career games with 27 starts for Washington, Reed has compiled 275 career receptions for 2,813 yards with 22 receiving touchdowns. In Week 4 of the 2016 season against Cleveland, Reed recorded his 200th career reception in his 38th career game, becoming the fastest tight end to reach 200 career receptions in NFL history, surpassing Pro Football Hall of Famer Kellen Winslow.

JAMISON CROWDER

Thirty-four wide receivers were drafted in the 2015 NFL Draft. As of the conclusion of the 2017 season, 30 of them had appeared in NFL game action. Thirteen of those players were drafted ahead of the moment when the Washington Redskins selected Jamison Crowder with the No. 105 overall selection in the fourth round.

However, only two of Crowder's classmates (Oakland's Amari Cooper and Minnesota's Stefon Diggs) have recorded more career receptions than the Duke product, who has placed himself on the NFL radar with 192 receptions for 2,240 yards and 12 receiving touchdowns in his young career.

Crowder entered his rookie season in 2015 with expectations of assuming the team's role at punt returner, but Crowder rapidly exceeded those limits and earned the team's top slot receiver role and became another weapon for the Redskins on third down.

"We had a penciled-in punt returner job for him, but for him to win the starting inside slot receiver is a testament to him and how quickly he picked it up and his production," Head Coach Jay Gruden said. "When you draft guys, you have high hopes for them, but you never expect them to be this much of a factor this early, especially fourth-fifth rounders."

"He's one of those kids: You can put him in a phone booth and you probably wouldn't get a hand on him."

- Receivers Coach Ike Hilliard to The Washington Post's Liz Clarke

In Week 5 of his sophomore campaign in 2016, Crowder ended the Redskins' 124-game punt return touchdown drought with an 85-yard touchdown at Baltimore. His punt return for touchdown was the Redskins' first since Oct. 26, 2008, when Santana Moss returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown at Detroit.

At 23 years and 114 days old, Crowder became the youngest member of the Redskins to return a punt for a touchdown since Brian Mitchell (23 years, 35 days) at Cincinnati on Sept. 22, 1991, according to records provided by Pro Football Reference.

Crowder finished the 2016 season with a 12.1-yard punt return average, the best by a member of the Redskins since 2001. His fourth-place ranking in the NFL in punt return average was the best by a member of the Redskins since Brian Mitchell's second-place finish in 1995. The dual threat was the only player in the NFL in 2016 to catch at least 65 passes and average at least 11.0 yards per return.

On offense, Crowder's 192 receptions from 2015-17 are the second-most by a member of the Redskins in the first three years of an NFL career.

VERNON DAVIS

What does it take to have coaches, teammates and broadcasters refer to you as "The Ageless One"?

How about a 6-foot-3, 244-pound veteran registering only 3.8 percent body fat the day after completing his 12th NFL season? What about that same man reportedly still running the 40-yard dash in the 4.4 range into his mid-30s?

For Vernon Davis, those astoundingly true facts tell only part of the story. A native of Washington, D.C., Davis came home in free agency in 2016 and delivered 87 catches and 1,231 yards in his first two seasons in burgundy and gold. At age 32-33 in those seasons, he ranks second only to Redskins legend Jerry Smith in both categories among tight ends age 30 or older in team history, according to records provided by Pro Football Reference.

Ageless as a physical specimen, Davis is trying to make his career production withstand the test of time as well. He now ranks in the Top 10 in NFL history in career receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns by a tight end.

"We all should get on Vernon Davis' diet. I mean, really. The guy's a freak. He's the most impressive guy I've been around really as far as taking care of his body, and whatever he's doing, he needs to tell all our young guys to do it because he's amazing.

He's running around like a 20-year-old kid. We're going to have to try to dive into that but I know he has a great routine in the offseason, during the season. His diet is top-notch. His workouts are on point. Not to mention he prepares and he's just always got a smile on his face.

He's just one of those guys you look forward to seeing every day and then you watch him practice and it's always hard and effective. Great guy, great player."

RYAN KERRIGAN

With a wrestling-inspired sack celebration, linebacker Ryan Kerrigan has earned the moniker "The Showstopper" since joining the Redskins in 2011. But while it might not have the same cachet, calling the three-time Pro Bowler "Mr. Reliable" might be just as apt.

If patience is a virtue, the Redskins were virtuous in the first round of the 2011 NFL Draft, as the team opted to trade back from its No. 10 overall selection to the 16th overall pick. With the selection, the Redskins selected Kerrigan, the then-defensive end out of Purdue.

Kerrigan has started all 112 regular season games played by the Redskins since he entered the league in 2011, the longest active streak of consecutive starts by any NFL linebacker. In 2016, Kerrigan became the first member of the Redskins to start all 16 games in each of the first six seasons of an NFL career since the adoption of the 16-game schedule in 1978. In Week 4 of the 2017 season, Kerrigan became the first member of the Redskins since at least 1970 to open a career with 100 consecutive regular season starts.

The Muncie, Ind. native is only the fifth player in NFL history to open a career with at least 7.5 sacks in each of his first seven seasons, joining Jared Allen, Derrick Thomas, DeMarcus Ware and Reggie White. He also became only the fifth member of the Redskins to post multiple 10-sack seasons since 1982 (Dexter Manley, 4; Charles Mann, 4; Andre Carter, 2; Brian Orakpo, 2). He's also displayed aptitude with the ball in hands, as he has returned all three of his career interceptions for touchdowns, joining Julius Peppers and Pro Football Hall of Famer Jason Taylor as the only players in league history with 60+ sacks and three or more interception return touchdowns.

Kerrigan's productivity has provided a number of opportunities for him to showcase his co-opted celebration.

"Will Compton has been kind of getting in my ear for a while to do the Shawn Michaels from wrestling — the HBK," Kerrigan said in 2014 of the inspiration for his celebrations. "All he kept saying was, 'Hit the HBK, hit the HBK.' Finally, I did right by him and hit the HBK a couple times. On the second and third ones, when I didn't do it, he was giving me a bunch of hell on the sidelines, like, 'Why didn't you do it? You need to trademark it.' I'm like, 'Well, I can't trademark it, it's HBK.' But that's where it came from."

The gesture resonated with wrestling fans and Redskins fans alike. The celebration was promoted by WWE on Twitter, and Redskins fans immediately began referring to the celebration as the "Heartbreak Kerrigan," or #HBKerrigan in hashtag form.

The Purdue product ended his college career tied for the Football Bowl Subdivision record with 14 career forced fumbles, and his innate knack for knocking the ball loose has translated to the NFL. Kerrigan has been credited with 22 forced fumbles in his career, the most by a member of the Redskins since 1994 and among the most by any NFL player since 2011.

Kerrigan's impact on the Redskins has transcended football, as he was honored with the team's Walter Payton Man of the Year award in 2015. In addition to participating in numerous events through the Washington Redskins Charitable Foundation, Kerrigan welcomed 185 guests to the Grand Hyatt Washington in 2015 for his third Celebrity Waiter Night, raising more than $100,000 for his Blitz for the Better Foundation, which provides support to seriously ill, special needs and physically challenged children throughout the Greater Washington D.C. area.

In training camp in 2016, the question was posed to Head Coach Jay Gruden: Is there a better example for young players than Kerrigan?

"Not really, no," Gruden said. "He's very humble, number one. Keeps to himself and does exactly what's asked of him in practice. He practices hard; in fact, we have to pull him back a little bit because he practices so hard and we want to keep him healthy for the 16-week grind. He's a top-notch guy, on and off the field, character-wise. He's what you're looking for."

CORNERBACK CONJUNCTION

JOSH NORMAN

When the Carolina Panthers rescinded cornerback Josh Norman's franchise tag and allowed the All-Pro defender to enter unrestricted free agency on April 20, roles instantly became reversed. The then-28-year-old lockdown corner became the subject of teams trying to lock down his services.

The Redskins mobilized quickly, dispatching members of the Redskins' coaching staff on April 22 to pick up Norman and his family from his Carolina home and bring them to team headquarters. The group arrived back in Ashburn early that afternoon, and after the full press and a family vote, Norman was a member of the Washington Redskins by 9:30 p.m.

"It was an exciting 24 hours there and we're happy as heck to get him," Head Coach Jay Gruden said. "I think he's one of the premier corners in the National Football League."

Norman joined the Redskins having previously appeared in 53 regular season games with 38 starts for Carolina, recording 178 tackles (136 solo), 36 passes defended, seven interceptions (two returned for touchdowns), four forced fumbles and three fumbles recovered from 2012-15.

In 2015, Norman started all 16 regular season games and all three postseason games for the Panthers, recording career highs in interceptions (four), forced fumbles (three) and fumbles recovered (two) in addition to tying for the league lead in interceptions returned for touchdowns (two). His highly decorated 2015 campaign resulted in a myriad of honors, including All-Pro selections from both the Associated Press and Pro Football Writers Association in addition to sharing PFWA Co-Most Improved Player of the Year honors with new teammate Kirk Cousins.

Since that breakout campaign in 2015, few defensive backs have been as disruptive as the man known colloquially as "J-No."

Norman's accolades and productivity speak for themselves, but what kind of person were the Redskins getting? Gruden and the Redskins learned early in 2016.

"I've been very impressed with Josh from the day that he got here," Gruden said. "He works extremely hard. He's got a great energy every single time that he walks out onto the field, and he's the last one off the field. He's attentive at meetings - he's excellent. As far as his off-the-field 'antics' or on-the-field penalties that he's gotten, he's a physical football player. He's in your face and he's very competitive. You don't want to change that about him at all; that's what makes him, him. Obviously we might have to work on his hand placement in bump-and-run so he doesn't hit the receiver in the head, but his aggression, his competitive style, that's what drew us to him in the first place. We would never change that."

QUINTON DUNBAR

In 2015, the Washington Redskins signed college free agent Quinton Dunbar as a wide receiver. A few months later during training camp, the coaching staff transitioned Dunbar to cornerback.

For the 2018 season, Dunbar has emerged to become an option for the starting role opposite Josh Norman in the secondary. Head Coach Jay Gruden has gone on record spotlighting Dunbar's athletic ability.

"Yeah, that is a great tribute to him and his work, you know, but when you have that type of speed and that type of length you try to find a spot for a guy with that type of athletic ability and Quinton has done a good job with buying in and making the adjustment.," said Gruden. "Now, with the opportunity he has in front of him, it's going to be up to him whether he takes the next step..."

SPOTLIGHT ON SPECIAL TEAMS

KICKER DUSTIN HOPKINS

The Redskins surprised many in Week 2 of the 2015 season when they elected to move on from kicker Kai Forbath, who exited as the franchise leader in field goal percentage among players with at least 50 attempts, in favor of signing kicker Dustin Hopkins.

After a solid debut in 2015, Hopkins went 34-for-42 on field goal attempts in 2016, breaking Mark Moseley's record (33 in 1983) for the most field goals in a single season in team history. In Week 3 that year, he tied a team record with five field goals in a 5-for-5 performance in a victory as part of an NFC Special Teams Player of the Week and Player of the Month performance.

MOST FIELD GOALS MADE (SINGLE SEASON, REDSKINS HISTORY):

5. Dustin Hopkins	2015-18	74	88	84.1

Beyond Hopkins' ability to boot the ball through the uprights, his ability to get it to stop and turn on a dime after 10 yards was vital to a Redskins' victory against Tampa Bay in Week 7 of the 2015 season. After facing an early 24-0 deficit, the Redskins scored late in the first half and at the start of the second half to cut the lead to 24-14, at which point Gruden and Special Teams Coordinator Ben Kotwica turned to Hopkins to deliver a surprise onside kick early in the third. Receiver Rashad Ross batted the skidding ball to safety Trenton Robinson, ending a league-wide 0-for-24 skid on onside kick attempts to start the 2015 season. The onside kick helped jumpstart the Redskins en route to recording the largest comeback victory in franchise history.

"His onside kicks, they're like magic balls. I don't know how he keeps them in play."

- Head Coach Jay Gruden

It was only the fourth successful onside kick by the Redskins since 2000 and ended a streak of 18 unsuccessful onside kick attempts by the Redskins over the previous nine seasons.

PUNTER TRESS WAY

In recent years, the Redskins have expressed a desire to create competition at every position and reward their own players who perform at high levels. Punter Tress Way is emblematic of both ideals.

The Redskins spent the majority of the 2014 offseason evaluating a punting battle between newcomers Robert Malone and Blake Clingan, but the race received a darkhorse candidate when the team claimed Way off waivers from Chicago on Aug. 20 that year. Way was given 10 days to stake a claim to the punting job.

Way accomplished the feat and has since posted historically relevant numbers, earned the special teams captaincy in 2015 and been rewarded with a multi-year contract extension in 2016.

In 2014, Way's punting numbers rewarded the coaching staff's faith. Way averaged 47.5 yards per punt, the highest by a Redskins player since World War II. He finished the season averaging 47.5 yards per punt to rank fourth in team history, trailing only Sammy Baugh's full-season NFL record (51.4 yards per punt in 1940) and Baugh's 1941 and 1942 campaigns (48.7 and 48.2). Way became the first member of the Redskins to lead the NFL in punting for a season since Sam Baker in 1958 (45.4).

While Way's left leg has been on display, the Redskins gave their third-year punter a chance to show off his right arm in Week 3 of the 2016 season. Locked in a tight, divisional road game against the New York Giants, Way threw a perfect spiral to cornerback Quinton Dunbar for a 31-yard gain on a fake punt. The fake punt was the Redskins' first successful fake kick of any kind since Week 10 of the 2009 season vs. Denver, when punter Hunter Smith connected with fullback Mike Sellers for a 35-yard touchdown.

In 2017 and throughout his career, Way has waged his field position war by dropping punts inside the 20 with regularity.

REDSKINS 24, CARDINALS 6

GLENDALE, Ariz. - Alex Smith looked like his old self. So did Adrian Peterson. When the 34-year-old Smith wasn't carving up the Arizona defense, the 33-year-old Peterson was running through it. The result was a 24-6 Washington victory on Sunday, coach Jay Gruden's first win in a season opener in five tries, and it was even more dominant than the final score would indicate.

Smith and Peterson were playing their first game as Redskins and the two veterans made an impact from the start. Smith, acquired from Kansas City in the offseason to replace Kirk Cousins, completed 21 of 30 passes without an interception and had TD throws of 13 yards to Chris Thompson and 4 yards to Jordan Reed. Peterson rushed for 96 yards on 26 carries, including a 1-yard touchdown run.

Peterson, who played for Arizona a year ago and signed with Washington as a free agent on Aug. 20, finished his day with a 52-yard reception, but fumbled at the end of the play. The Redskins outgained the Cardinals 429-213 and had 30 first downs to Arizona's 14 and it was even more one-sided before the Cardinals showed some life late in the game. Washington rushed for 182 yards to Arizona's 68.

Arizona avoided a shutout when David Johnson ran 2 yards for a touchdown with 5:47 to play. Johnson, who signed a three-year, $39 million contract extension with Arizona on Saturday night with $30 million guaranteed, carried nine times for 37 yards and caught five passes for 30 yards. Sam Bradford, in his debut as Cardinals quarterback, was 20 of 34 for 153 yards and was intercepted once. The Redskins manhandled the Arizona defense in a dominant first half to lead 21-0 at the break. And the Arizona team under the new coaching regime was booed roundly as it left the field.

The statistics were stunningly one-sided through the first two quarters: 261 yards for the Redskins to 36 yards for the Cardinals. Smith completed 17 of 20 passes for 171 yards and two touchdowns. Bradford, meanwhile, was 3 of 7 for 11 yards. Washington had the ball for 22 minutes, 57 seconds to the Cardinals' 7:03. Arizona got two first downs on its first possession and went three-and-out the only other two times it had the ball in the first half.

Washington, meanwhile, had touchdown drives of 80, 73 and 92 yards behind a powerful rushing game and the efficient management of Smith. The first scoring drive went 80 yards in 11 plays, Smith went 13 yards to Thompson on the first play of the second quarter for the score.

After Arizona's first three-and-out, Washington used up 9:06 in a 15-play, 73-yard drive, Peterson plowing in from the 1-yard line to make it 14-0. The Cardinals went nowhere again and the Redskins took advantage of their last chance of the half. Smith completed 7 of 7 passes for 77 yards in a 10-play, 92-yard drive. Smith threw 4 yards to Reed for the touchdown and it was 21-0 with 8 seconds left in the half.

KYSHOEN JARRETT

After one hit ended his Redskins career,
Kyshoen Jarrett coaches with hopes of a comeback

By Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post
August 24, 2018

All Kyshoen Jarrett could see was the end zone, the stands and the stadium lights.

The sensation in his fingertips faded as he lay on his stomach, dazed and desperate to feel something other than panic. Time stopped. Everything went silent around him — everything except the frantic thoughts replaying in his head.

“God, help me,” he whispered.

He was the Washington Redskins’ do-it-all safety and special-teamer, selected in the sixth round of the 2015 NFL draft for his versatility, toughness and natural instincts. And by the time Washington faced the Dallas Cowboys in the season finale of his rookie year, the Redskins had clinched an NFC playoff spot, and Jarrett had elevated himself to trusted asset in the secondary.

“I just did my job,” the Virginia Tech alum said. “And I smiled when I did it.”

Then came the hit.

Jarrett still can visualize the pivotal play unfolding: The Cowboys’ backup tight end moving behind the line of scrimmage. Running back Darren McFadden taking the handoff and heading toward the running lane.

Instinctively, Jarrett lowered his shoulder to make the tackle. And from that moment, he was changed.

“My body went numb,” Jarrett said softly, reflecting on the helmet-to-helmet collision that altered his life almost three years ago. “I remember everybody coming onto the field and asking me if I wanted to get on the stretcher. And I just wasn’t with it.”

He was determined to walk off the field to assure family and friends watching the game from afar that he was okay. But the tears streaming down his face as a Redskins staffer held his limp right arm at a 90-degree angle told a different story.

Jarrett, now 25, leaned back in a leather chair and clasped his hands together — a subtle movement that in some ways is a miracle. He shouldn’t be here, sitting in an office at the team’s home base in Ashburn, clad in burgundy and gold practice attire. He shouldn’t be smiling. He shouldn’t be able to move his fingers, let alone curl them into a fist.

Three years ago, he suffered nerve damage in his neck and shoulder that was so severe his right arm hung lifeless at his side. Yet Jarrett remains a fixture in the fabric of the Redskins franchise — no longer as a player but as a coaching intern working with the defensive backs and special teams units. It was the least Coach Jay Gruden felt he could do for his former draft pick with the infectious personality and keen football smarts.

“I welcome him on our staff any time, any place,” Gruden said. “I just want to make sure he was ready to commit to it.”

But Jarrett’s journey didn’t end there, and while he isn’t certain what lies ahead, the beloved Redskin isn’t quite ready to give up on his dream. Right now, he said, he’s “50-50” on making a comeback.

“There’s something in me that believes this is not the end,” Jarrett said. “Me being on the sideline — that’s not how the story ends.”

A loss of confidence

Jarrett’s own reflection became torture of a different kind.

He avoided mirrors in an effort to ignore his distorted image. He had been an athlete, sculpted and sleek. After the injury, he loathed the body standing before him.

“Throughout my life, I liked the way I looked,” he said, laughing. “I felt like I was handsome, attractive, well built, put together, walking in confidence. And then this injury — it just took a lot out of me.”

Four months later, Mayo Clinic doctors in Minnesota provided Jarrett with a proper diagnosis: He had suffered a serious injury to the brachial plexus, the network of nerves that extends from the spinal cord, through a passageway in the neck and into the armpit.

The cluster of nerves controls sensory functions in the upper extremities.

It took several weeks before 50 percent of the feeling returned in his right arm, he said. And it was over a year before Jarrett underwent a nerve transfer from his biceps to his deltoid muscle.

But the psychological scars still linger.

While the left side of his body remained chiseled and muscular, the right “was just bone” following the collision. He was unable to lift or use his damaged arm, and atrophy rapidly set in early on, so much so that Jarrett’s weight dropped from 195 pounds to 180. He couldn’t bear to look at who he had become.

“That lack of confidence even played a part in how I felt my wife felt about me,” said Jarrett, who met his wife, Chantel, during their freshman year at Virginia Tech. “I have my days. But I’m no longer in that space of saying, ‘Man, I don’t like the way I look,’ or projecting how my wife must feel. [But] that’s not how she views me. Never was.”

He learned resiliency from his mother, Vinise Capers, who raised four boys on her own, including Jarrett’s older brother Daishawn, a legally blind triplegic who has cerebral palsy and limited cognitive ability and uses a wheelchair. Jarrett and his mother often served as Daishawn’s primary caregivers — bathing him, dressing him, carrying him, tending to his every need.

Along the way, Jarrett learned never to complain. Shedding his own insecurities, however, was a task he wasn’t emotionally equipped to handle. At least not at first.

“I’m not much of a talker, especially about my feelings,” said Jarrett, who credited the Redskins’ chaplain, Pastor Brett Fuller, with getting him “aligned with some men of God” at Grace Covenant Church in Chantilly, Va. “That’s not what I was brought up to do; I didn’t have a father figure who did that. So it was another fear I had to overcome personally: to get out all of this built-up frustration.”

Even on the hottest of days, Jarrett still wears a long-sleeved shirt to cover his right arm, which is noticeably thinner than his left. It’s his form of protection from the stares and the possible judgment from strangers who are unaware of what he’s lost.

“Sometimes I feel like, if you look at me, you kind of just see disappointment, based on the career or the potential you saw someone having on the field,” he said, staring at the floor. “Maybe I’ll get over that one day.”

'Just a starting point'

In a sea of sweaty bodies trekking through the mud and thick, muggy air, Jarrett's slender, 5-foot-11 frame is easy to spot. He is buoyant as ever, flashing an easy smile on another long day that's only halfway done.

Three years ago, he arrived at Redskins Training Center in Richmond eager to begin his NFL journey. His path has since detoured, taking him from practice drills led by Gruden to 7:15 a.m. meetings alongside his former coach during training camp.

Jarrett has been given a second chance for a new football life, one that centers on him instructing players instead of being one himself. But deep down, he hasn't given up on playing again.

"Oh, yeah, I definitely got the itch," he said with a grin. "The first day I came out here, I felt like I was coming out here for camp. I just had no helmet. The last time I was here, it was all positive. This is where I developed into the nickel position, where I showed I could be versatile."

By the end of the 2015 season, Jarrett was logging valuable playing time in the secondary. "I was loving it," he said, beaming. "Maybe I was probably looking too far ahead. I was already thinking about the things that I could improve on going into my second year, how I wanted to prepare, how I wanted to just get better."

His smile fades. The tone of his voice becomes soft.

"That rookie year," Jarrett said quietly, "it was just a starting point."

There hasn't been a day since his on-field collision with McFadden that Jarrett hasn't felt pain. There are "light shocks" that last a second. Sometimes they linger for 10 or 15. Other days, "it just feels like somebody's ripping my arm apart," he said. The nerve pain medication he was prescribed doesn't work.

Even on his wedding day, Feb. 19, 2016 — a month after the injury — Jarrett experienced nerve shocks and had to help his right arm with his left to hold his wife's hand at the altar.

"I guess that's the bitter part," Jarrett said, "just knowing that I'm still young."

'A story to tell'

Only a handful of Redskins remain from Jarrett's playing days. Only a select few have any inkling of who he was before. But Gruden remembers.

"It was devastating," the coach said. "That type of injury was hard for a lot of people to take because he's a great kid. He's very passionate about the game, and that just came out the way he played. You hate to see anything like that happen to anybody but especially somebody like Kyshoen. He could have been a hell of a player."

Unlike so many athletes, Jarrett had proved he was good enough to play in the NFL. But after 16 games, his career was over.

"It feels like the game has more so been taken away," Jarrett said.

He stressed that it's "a huge blessing" to still be a part of the Redskins family as he recalled the tears that had welled in his eyes when Bruce Allen, Daniel Snyder and former general manager Scot McCloughan reluctantly told him in Allen's office that they had to waive him with a failed physical designation before the start of the 2016 training camp.

Jarrett is enjoying the process of learning how to be an NFL coach. But he can't help but wonder what could have been.

While at practice, he envisions himself in team drills. He pictures himself picking off quarterback Alex Smith. Sometimes he simply imagines how "good it would feel" to run around and then trip and fall to the grass. He has found joy being this close to the game he loves. But the proximity also has awakened his competitive fire.

"I still feel like I got some juice!" Jarrett squealed, clapping his hands together. "I just don't look the part."

According to him, his only physical limitation is keeping his right arm raised above his head for an extended period of time without assistance.

"I guess that's the bitter part," he added, "just knowing that I'm still young."

Jarrett is suspended between two worlds — not far enough removed from his old life to abandon thoughts of his playing days but taking steps in a new direction, one that could eventually lead to him becoming one of the youngest defensive backs coaches in the NFL. He insisted he's "50-50" on making a comeback, but in the same breath, he cautions himself.

"But maybe it's just time to move on and open my mind, my vision, of what I'll become," he said.

In time, resolution will come. For now, Jarrett is certain of one thing.

"I was chosen for a particular reason for this journey," he said. "And I just know if it's not the end [of me playing], then this is going to be a story to tell."

REDSKINS REPLACEMENT PLAYERS

Thirty years later, Redskins replacement players receive Super Bowl rings

By Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post
June 12, 2018

Charles Jackson held up the faded fabric, showing off the now off-white, short-sleeved jersey with the burgundy and gold stripes on the sleeves and his old No. 37. After more than three decades, this was his moment to bask in the afterglow of a job well done and the chance to finally be considered a “Redskin for life.”

“I hope you washed it!” someone cried out from the crowd.

Like the other former players who filled the rows inside the auditorium at Redskins Park, Jackson had longed for some form of acknowledgment, for a firmer sense of belonging to something bigger. And on Tuesday, the Washington Redskins finally obliged, honoring 25 replacement players who were signed to the roster during the 1987 strike.

The hastily-assembled squad — featuring a hodgepodge of former draft picks, no-name athletes and even Willard Scissum, a 7-Eleven security guard-turned NFL-offensive tackle — went 3-0 during its brief stint before the regular Redskins returned to win Super Bowl XXII.

“Thirty, 31 years ago, I wore that jersey,” Jackson said after the ceremony. “And I’m thinking, what better place to display that jersey again than to receive my Super Bowl ring? So I brought that jersey out because it just made me feel all of that passion back then. It was a great day.”

Their decision to cross the picket lines was met with ire by regular players. But the hard feelings of the past and the derogatory nickname that hounded them for years — “scabs”— are distant memories. The men who played a small but significant role in the franchise earning the Lombardi Trophy finally heard their names read aloud by former general manager Charley Casserly and received the championship hardware their fingers felt empty without.

“It was just the right amount of weight to level off my body. It was just a little light for 30 years,” joked former linebacker David Windham, who was drafted by the New England Patriots and played a Thursday game with the Canadian Football League’s Saskatchewan Roughriders before suiting up for the Redskins three days later.

For Windham, the ceremony felt more like validation. For Jackson, it represented “vindication.” Meanwhile, Kevin “Tony” Robinson, who quarterbacked the Redskins to a 13-7 victory over the Dallas Cowboys on “Monday Night Football,” called it “one of the happiest days of my life.” And all of them agreed that it was a surreal experience that had exceeded their expectations.

The event began with a group singalong to the “Hail to the Redskins” fight song and ended with Doug Williams, the Super Bowl MVP that season, posing for a team photo alongside Dexter Manley, Gary Clark and the replacement players.

Each replacement player received $27,000, a share of the Super Bowl money. But last year’s airing of the ESPN “30 for 30” documentary “Year of the Scab” helped put the process for honoring those players in motion.

“The emotions right now are glorified and justified,” Windham said. “Even though we missed it 30 years ago, this is making up for it 100 percent.”

Current Redskins chatted and posed for pictures with the replacement players at the end of the team’s first mandatory minicamp practice of the week. Cornerback Josh Norman even rubbed Jackson’s Super Bowl ring for good luck.

“Being around one of those, kind of hope some of that passes on to you,” said Norman, who lost to Denver in Super Bowl 50 as a member of the Carolina Panthers.

The replacement players’ contribution in 1987 may seem insignificant to some. But before he introduced each by name, Casserly acknowledged that their efforts paved the way for the Super Bowl run.

“It’s great to see [Williams and Manley] because they’re real Redskins for life,” Jackson said. “And to be in the same room with them again lets me know that I’m a real Redskin and I’m a Redskin for life, too.”

The following players were in attendance during the ceremony:

DEANGELO HALL

RICHMOND, Va. In the wake of earlier reports on his retirement, DeAngelo Hall officially announced his retirement in front of members of the media at Bon Secours Washington Redskins Training Center on August 1 following the team's practice session during training camp.

A playmaker on defense, Hall played cornerback and safety during his 14-year career and was known for matching up one-on-one with some of the NFL's top receivers. He was known for coming up with game-changing plays.

Hall joined the Redskins in 2008 and has chipped away at several of the team's individual records. On October 24, 2010 versus the Chicago Bears, He tied a team record becoming the third player to record four interceptions in a single game. He has capped four seasons as the team's leader in interceptions including leading the category at the end of the year for three consecutive seasons (2009-11).

As a member of the Washington Redskins, Hall finished with 23 career interceptions which currently ranks 10th all time in franchise history. His 23 interceptions since joining the Redskins on Nov. 7, 2008 were tied for eighth among active players in the NFL during that time frame.

In 10 seasons with the Washington Redskins, Hall has played in 108 games with 96 starts, registering 530 tackles (389 solo, according to STATS, LLC), eight fumbles recovered, eight fumbles forced, three interceptions returned for touchdown and a sack.

In 2015, Hall recorded a 17-yard fumble return for touchdown in the third quarter of a division-clinching Week 16 win at Philadelphia. With the touchdown, he tied former Atlanta Falcons linebacker Jessie Tuggle for second-most fumble returns for touchdowns in NFL history (five).

He became the first player in NFL history to record at least five interception return touchdowns and five fumble return touchdowns in a career. The Week 16 touchdown was the first defensive touchdown by the Redskins in Philadelphia since Sean Taylor's 39-yard fumble return to seal a playoff berth at Lincoln Financial Field on Jan. 1, 2006.

At the end of the 2015 season, he appeared in 11 games, marking the 11th time in 12 NFL seasons he has played in double-digit contests since entering the league in 2004.

For his career which includes stints with the Atlanta Falcons and Oakland Raiders, Hall appeared in 171 making 159 starts and amassed 809 tackles (634 solo), 141 passes defended, 43 interceptions, five touchdowns, 17 tackles for loss, 15 fumble recoveries, 11 forced fumbles and two sacks.

Hall was drafted by the Falcons with the eighth pick in the first round of the 2004 NFL Draft from Virginia Tech.

For his collegiate career, Hall recorded 190 tackles, 20 passes defended, eight interceptions, two forced fumbles, one fumble recovery and seven receptions for 86 yards with one touchdown in his three year career at Virginia Tech. A native of Chesapeake, Va., Hall attended Deep Creek H.S.

"I tell people all the time, as a leader in the last couple years, I was always trying to groom the next crop of guys to take my spot, and when I finally felt like they were ready, or it showed they were ready, it was time for me to go."

PRES. OF BUSINESS OPERATIONS AND CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER BRIAN LAFEMINA

Redskins hire Brian Lafemina from NFL to lead business side

By Kareem Copeland and Mark Maske, The Washington Post

The Washington Redskins hired Brian Lafemina as the team's president of business operations and chief operating officer in a newly created position.

Lafemina will head the business side of operations and report to team owner Daniel Snyder, the team announced. He worked for the NFL the last eight years and was directly involved in NFL-wide programs focused on fan experience, ticketing strategy, Super Bowl strategy, Pro Bowl strategy and stadium development.

Several people within the NFL said they expect Lafemina to become a central figure in the Redskins' planning for their next stadium, a task that has been the primary responsibility of team president Bruce Allen.

"He's very well thought of in the league office and by the teams," said one person familiar with the league's inner workings. "He's really data-driven. He sees things from the fans' perspective."

Lafemina has worked particularly closely with teams with overhauling and improving their ticket-selling operations, that person said.

"Brian has been one of the most highly regarded NFL executives amongst league ownership for many years because of his deep understanding of our business, his focus on partner relationships and his genuine belief that fans must be at the center of every decision we make," Snyder said in a statement.

"Brian is coming to Washington with fresh thinking and big ideas to implement, and I have full confidence that with Brian's addition and with Bruce Allen continuing as team president, the Redskins' success will continue to grow, both on and off the field."

Lafemina's hire was a year in the making after Snyder first tried to lure him from the league offices. He previously held multiple positions over a 22-year span with the Madison Square Garden Company, finishing as senior vice president of Madison Square Garden Sports.

Another person close to the situation said the Redskins' interest in Lafemina had been long-standing.

"They've been trying to get him for a long time," that person said.

"Nothing could have prepared me more for this role than working at the NFL," Lafemina said in a statement. "Dan first approached me about a year ago to discuss the possibility of me joining the Redskins. During that time, I was able to see firsthand his passion for the Redskins, the game of football and his deep commitment to the Washington, D.C., community. Working with Dan and Bruce to develop a new, dynamic stadium that matches the vibrancy of this organization and its fan base will be an exciting challenge and one of our top priorities."

Before joining the NFL, Lafemina spent 22 years at The Madison Square Garden Company in a variety of roles, starting as an intern and working his way up to Senior Vice President of Madison Square Garden Sports, where he was responsible for managing the business operations of the New York Knicks and New York Rangers.

Lafemina is a 1989 graduate of Rutgers University, where he earned his bachelor's degree in economics.

HEAD COACH JAY GRUDEN

Gruden happy with 'evolved' culture as Redskins shift to mandatory minicamp

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
June 11, 2018

The Washington Redskins begin mandatory veteran minicamp Tuesday with a final scheduled three-day workout before taking a six-week break before training camp starts July 26 in Richmond.

By all accounts, the organized team activities portion of the off-season was successful as newcomers, particularly quarterback Alex Smith, were indoctrinated into the system and no major injuries were reported.

There was little drama with the majority of the team present. There were no issues with second-round draft pick Derrius Guice, who is fast becoming a fan favorite after rumors of character concerns caused the former LSU running back to slip to the 59th pick despite receiving first-round grades from many prognosticators.

The biggest note was the absence of starting inside linebacker Zach Brown, who missed the early parts of the session while moving, according to Coach Jay Gruden. Brown tweeted the move was complete May 31, and the team's website posted a picture of him participating June 5. But he was absent again during the workout open to media the following day. Those practices were voluntary, though.

The status of former quarterback Kirk Cousins's contract was a focal point in past camps, but Smith just signed a four-year extension.

The workout atmosphere has drawn praise from Smith and new Redskins receiver Paul Richardson. Smith said this has been the most he has gotten out of OTAs as he enters the 14th year of his career. Richardson mentioned on more than one occasion how well teammates have helped one another, despite competing for the same position.

Gruden credited the veterans.

"The good thing is, I don't have to put my finger on everything that's going on around here," Gruden said last week. "I have great trust in the players that are down here, led by the veteran guys like [Ryan] Kerrigan and Ziggy Hood and the rest of the older-type guys. They do an excellent job down here, and [when] they're out at practice, they're in meetings. [Orlando] Scandrick coming in, obviously Alex Smith, Colt McCoy. ... Quarterbacks do a great job. Offensive linemen, [Brandon] Scherff is now considered a veteran. He just works his butt off. We've got a good group of guys. Mason Foster, [D.J.] Swearinger, obviously.

"One thing as a coach you don't want to have to worry about is just always micromanaging every detail about meetings and what's going on in the locker room. We have a great group of guys that are tightknit, and they work extremely hard."

The tone of OTAs can be fairly mild, compared to training camp, due to collectively bargained rules that limit contact and the intensity of sessions. Attendance, injuries and position battles are often the main talking points. There's an eye on individual progression, but evaluation can be limited given the structure of workouts. There's no tackling, so it's hard to get a read on running backs and front-seven defenders. Also, linemen aren't seeing live action. Gruden's sessions can be intense and competitive, but the physicality is different from training camp. Quarterbacks and skill-position players typically benefit the most.

Gruden said the culture of the team has matured since he took over in 2014.

"Yeah, it's evolved, and it goes into your draft and who you're getting as free agents and all that stuff," Gruden said. "Sometimes you have to deal with some issues from time to time, but it's important for the veteran leaders to take them under their wing and try to bring them along the right path. And I feel like we have a good majority-rules-type thing that are all hard workers and good guys and good football players."

The Redskins now hope these feel-good summer workouts translate into fall success and the second playoff berth of Gruden's tenure. The team finished 7-9 in 2017 and missed the postseason for the second year in a row.

Jay Gruden ramps up Redskins training camp with 'most physical practice of the year'

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
August 4, 2018

RICHMOND — Third and one. Fourth and one. Goal line.

Those situations took up significant portions of the Redskins practice Saturday, with the team focused on short-yardage periods in a physical session that was not meant for the weak. The offense and defense scrapped for inches as running backs repeatedly slammed into the line of scrimmage and linebackers and defensive linemen teed off downhill.

"That was, by far, the most physical practice of the year," defensive lineman Jonathan Allen said. "We love it. That's what we do on the offensive line and defensive line. We bang and clang, man. That's what we love about football."

The backs were tested, and both sides had their moments. Derrius Guice, Rob Kelley and Samaje Perine all had one-yard touchdown runs, but Allen and Preston Smith also made big stops.

The run game is often hard to judge during training camp. There is little live tackling, and it can be difficult to tell if a back would have shaken a defender or powered through a tackle. Coach Jay Gruden, however, allowed for live tackling and let the guys go at it in close quarters.

"It's something all the running backs look forward to," Kelley said. "Some people say we struggled with [it] last year, in the short-yardage and goal-line type situations. It was an opportunity for us to redeem ourselves. It's not a real game, but an opportunity to show we're putting the effort in and the work in to redeem ourselves."

"When everybody woke up this morning, they had it on their mind: 'Okay, I've got to put this work in. It's not going to be no breeze.' You can't just go through the motions today. You go through the motions, and somebody's going to get hurt. So, you've got to go full speed. I think it was one of those days that everybody had on their mind."

Jay Gruden doesn't see any 'glaring weakness' on Redskins

By Matthew Paras, The Washington Times
July 25, 2018

RICHMOND — After they were the most injured team in the NFL last season, the Washington Redskins weren't going to stand pat. The franchise built a whole new recovery room at its training facility in Richmond — installing things like cryogenic chambers and tanks for salt baths.

Coach Jay Gruden even touted — and remember, he's a football coach, not a doctor — the team's "foot heal stuff."

"Whatever you need, we've got you covered to get you back on the field," said Gruden, who has also adjusted practice times in hopes of keeping players healthy. "We've even got a Gatorade ice machine, for God's sake."

But, Gruden acknowledged, improvements off the field only go so far.

"At the end of the day, these guys are going to have to go out there, hit some people and show they can play the game of football," Gruden said as the Redskins reported to camp ahead of Thursday's first practice.

Entering his fifth season at the helm after a disappointing 7-9 campaign last year, Gruden said in January that he knows his job could be on the line if the Redskins' upcoming season goes south. He called the 2017 record "not good enough" — even with the injuries.

Gruden, who has made the playoffs only once in four seasons, said he has high expectations for this year's team.

"I don't think we have any glaring weakness," Gruden said. "We've addressed a lot of them throughout the draft and free agency and veteran guys here. I think our depth has been addressed. Now it's a matter of going out there and playing together."

For the first time in years, the Redskins will have stability at quarterback.

Washington, of course, traded for Alex Smith instead of re-signing Kirk Cousins, whose contract status often overshadowed the state of the team. In addition to Smith's arrival, the Redskins think they now have a solid cast of offensive weapons, a strong offensive line and a promising young defense to compete.

The Redskins, however, will take their time re-incorporating the high number of players still recovering from injuries.

The franchise has only two players — defensive tackle Stacy McGee (core muscle surgery and cornerback Josh Holsey (foot) — who will open camp on the Physically Unable to Perform list.

But key pieces, like left tackle Trent Williams, tight end Jordan Reed and running back Chris Thompson, were unable to practice during OTAs. They will be eased into training camp.

"We'll have a plan for these guys moving forward," Gruden said. "Mainly get them through individual [drills]. Get them some limited team reps early, if any. And then just slowly adjust their roles as they feel better."

The Redskins plan to be cautious. Wide receiver Josh Doctson received a precautionary MRI on his Achilles, but Gruden said the results came back clean. The third-year wideout missed most of his entire rookie season with an Achilles injury.

"Nothing showed up, so why would it be alarming?" Gruden said. "We're good."

If there was a silver lining to the Redskins' injury-filled 2017, the situation allowed the coaching staff to evaluate other players. Gruden added the injuries helped the team's depth.

Optimism, though, is always high this time of year, and it will be up to the Redskins to prove they have improved.

"The good thing about this football team, in my opinion, is that we've got a good core group of veterans that they don't need a lot of talking to," Gruden said. "They know what it takes to be a successful football player and football team."

"Now, it's just a matter of us gelling as a group and playing well on Sundays."

DEFENSIVE COORDINATOR GREG MANUSKY

Greg Manuskay is a bit of a character, but he plays a serious role for the Redskins' defense

By Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post
August 4, 2018

RICHMOND — A flash of bright green is all you see.

The burly man's body dwarfs the Jetson moped as he cruises down West Broad Street at 15 mph. His 6-foot-1, 260-pound frame and close-cropped gray hair are the only distinguishing features, but the man on the moped — his wife's moped, to be exact — holds the key to the Washington Redskins defense.

Around 9:15 a.m., Greg Manuskay makes the left-hand turn off DMV Drive, pedaling up the incline to the VIP parking lot. Finally, his near-daily four-mile trek from the team's hotel to its training facility is complete.

"He's not very bright," Redskins Coach Jay Gruden says, half-jokingly, of his defensive coordinator. "He's too big for that scooter. He doesn't wear a helmet. He's just not very smart. What's the point of riding a scooter? You get three, four miles of exercise on a bike, maybe. I'm worried about him doing it. I just hope he doesn't get hit by a car."

Gruden can't afford to lose Manuskay now, not with expectations as high as they are for the Redskins, and their defense in particular. During the 2017 season — Manuskay's first after he was promoted from coaching the team's outside linebackers — Washington ranked ninth in the league in passing defense (213.8 yards allowed per game) and 12th in takeaways. But the unit's NFL-worst run defense, which surrendered 134.1 yards per game on the ground, left Washington with the 21st-ranked total defense and is a sore point for the group, which is aiming to no longer be "the laughingstock of the conference," according to safety D.J. Swearingen.

Securing quarterback stability was paramount this offseason, but maintaining continuity on his coaching staff was just as important to Gruden, who fired former defensive coordinator Joe Barry after the 2016 season. The Redskins' defense was ranked 28th overall that year.

In Manuskay, Gruden believes he has a coach who is not only confident in himself and his schemes, but someone who has "a great feel for what he wants to do."

"It's been good for guys like [Quinton] Dunbar, [Fabian] Moreau, Montae Nicholson, Zach Brown, and for some of these defensive linemen to hear the same stuff for the second year in a row," Gruden said, echoing similar comments made by players who say they feel confident the defense can play faster together because of its familiarity with Manuskay's schemes.

"It's beneficial," Gruden continued. "You never want to go through too much change unless you feel like it's absolutely necessary. So if you can have some consistency in your approach on defense, it's good for everybody involved."

Manuskay's personality — equal parts meeting-room enforcer and gregarious gag artist — is what endears him to coaches and players alike. His 12-year NFL career, which began with the Redskins in 1988, also gives him credibility in the locker room. "He's one of the biggest reasons I wanted to come back here," said linebacker Mason Foster, who returned in January on a two-year deal. "It's great to play for a guy like that. Just the way he coaches. As someone who played in the league as long as he did, he understands what players go through on a daily basis, so it's great. He can relate to the players, and I think guys appreciate that."

"Right now, everybody's tired, everybody's worrying about their job, and he keeps a fun environment around. And you need that," added veteran defensive lineman Ziggy Hood. "Because there's going to be some bad days where you're going through a rough patch and you need to smile."

Those who know Manuskay well often highlight his loud intensity and his no-nonsense approach to football. But ask players and coaches to describe the 51-year-old Pennsylvania native, and they will initially laugh or shake their heads as they trade stories of Manuskay's maniacal ways.

Outside linebacker Ryan Kerrigan recalled arriving at Redskins Park on a Friday morning earlier this offseason. Because it was an off day, he assumed the building would be empty at 7 a.m. Turns out, he was wrong: "I walk in and there's nobody else in the lobby. And all of a sudden I hear a real loud dog bark noise and I see Manuskay behind our secretary's desk, just barking and yelling and laughing. He scared the hell out of me and he's like, 'Oh, I got you! I got you.' That's just Manuskay."

Gruden chuckles as he attempts to sum up the essence of his coordinator: "He's going to ride over on his [expletive] scooter. He's going to stand behind the rope and yell your name and ask for your autograph. And you're going to look over there and it's going to be him laughing at you."

Manuskay is all business when it counts. But he is uniquely entertaining, refusing to be anything other than his intensely wild, comical self. "What you see is what you get with Greg," Gruden said. "He's not going to try to impress anybody by being somebody's he's not."

That's why the coordinator didn't think twice before bringing his wife's bright green moped to training camp last year. "It's street legal," Manuskay said with a laugh. "I should wear a helmet. I know that. I should. But I'm old."

Depending on the day and his pre-practice workload, he might ride his "normal bike" to the facility before lifting weights. But most days he is riding his electric-powered scooter. "That's Manuskay," Hood said, shaking his head. "He exercises enough, he's not going to want to do anything more than that. I'd do the same thing if I was him. As long as it moves, that's all that matters."

"I mean, he might pop the tires on it," Foster added, referring to Manuskay's husky frame. "I wouldn't put anything past him. I wouldn't be surprised if he showed up riding a unicycle or something."

A few days later, Manuskay zeroes in on his target following an afternoon practice and trudges through the muddy field to deliver an important update. It's unclear if Gruden's concerns have finally gotten to him or if the longtime coach came to the decision on his own.

Either way, the end result is one all of the Redskins will support. "Hey," Manuskay says, smiling. "I got a helmet."

DL JONATHAN ALLEN

Richard Allen did not raise his two sons to fail. He is an Army man, a retired sergeant first class, who sees no effort worth anything unless it is complete. Thirteen years ago, his youngest child, Jonathan, wanted to play football, and he asked his son if he was playing for fun or if he sought to be the best.

"I want to be the best player I can be," he remembers Jonathan saying.

Richard pulled out a clipboard and then went with Allen to every practice at the park near their Chesapeake, Va., home, sitting off to the side, taking notes that would become the heart of lectures later that evening. After practice, as the other players packed up their bags and headed home, he made his son run sprints, tearing across the field again and again until Allen stood exhausted in the late-day sun.

He was 10 years old.

Plenty old enough to treat a game like a man, the father believed.

"I told my son, he has to honor his commitment. He can't quit,"

Richard Allen says now.

Want to know what drives the player who is among the most essential to the success of the Washington Redskins' defense? Want to understand the fire that burns in the team's defensive end, the Redskins' first-round pick in 2017, the key to a line that was Washington's burden last season? Look back to the lessons delivered by an old Army sergeant on a kid's football field in Chesapeake. The desire born there still lives on the pristine grass behind Redskins headquarters 200 miles away in Ashburn.

A rare accountability

Last month, Jonathan Allen and the rest of Washington's first-team defense looked flat in a 29-17 preseason game loss to the Denver Broncos. It was not a good performance. And though the game did not count, Allen was furious.

"We looked terrible out there," he said that night.

He was still steaming two days later when the Redskins held their first practice after the defeat. The players wore pads and on each play Allen thundered through the offensive line, players said later, treating a low-contact workout as if it were an actual game.

"You always want to play good football: preseason games, practice, whatever it is," Allen said a few days later, sitting on a couch inside Redskins headquarters. "You never want to go out there and play how we played. You want to grow from that and move on."

When Redskins players are asked what it is that impresses them the most about Allen, they say it is his accountability. When Allen is asked where that comes from, he goes back to those fields in Chesapeake, to all those post-practice sprints in front of the man with the clipboard who wasn't even a coach.

"Oh, that's my dad," Allen says. "Twenty-three years in the military."

Richard Allen had what might be one of the Army's most sobering positions. He studied ways to mitigate contamination from nuclear and chemical weapons. Much of his time was spent making damage assessments and calculating decay rates. It was serious work. But the Army had made Richard a serious man. When he gained custody of his two sons around the time Jonathan was 9, he was determined to raise them with military standards of discipline and respect.

In Richard Allen's house there was no football without straight A's in school. Jonathan made sure to get straight A's. Richard also had Jonathan do 100 pushups every day, the repetitions broken into increments of 20, and insisted he do each one "nice and slow." If Jonathan's technique grew sloppy or he rushed the exercise, Richard made him do the pushups again.

"Over the course of time you will be bigger, stronger and faster," Richard said.

Maybe this sounds extreme, an old-school father driving his children much too hard, but a funny thing happened after those youth football practices back in Chesapeake. The other players saw how Jonathan had become better than them, and they started running, too. At first, only a handful of kids joined him, then a few more and a few more, until nearly the whole team was sprinting back and forth across the field.

That's when Richard Allen added another rule for his son: Make sure you always finish first.

"He was supposed to give 100 percent all the time," Richard Allen says. "I set a high standard for everything my sons did."

What do an Army father's edicts more than a decade old have to do with these Redskins? Richard Allen's high measure for everything hasn't left Jonathan Allen. It's with him in the team's weight room, in defensive meetings, and on a practice field two days after a meaningless exhibition game.

There is a lot of pressure on Washington's defensive front this season. Last year, the Redskins gave up 2,146 rushing yards — an average of more than 134 per game and the most by any NFL team. Blame for finishing 32nd out of 32 teams against the run fell on the linemen and the linebackers. While Allen played just five games before going on injured reserve in October with a Lisfranc injury, he felt all of the sting that comes with being the worst in the league at something. Being last did not meet Richard Allen's standard.

A chance to be 'special'

Jonathan Allen had never really lost before. He played college football at Alabama, where championships are the norm. He also had never missed games with injury. The experience was torment. When he came back to practice this spring, his foot finally healthy, his determination was fierce. He might not have been a huge part of finishing last against the run, but he owned it like he had been on the field for every play.

"He's a fighter, a really great competitor," Redskins Coach Jay Gruden said, adding that with Allen healthy and now joined by his former Alabama teammate, nose tackle Daron Payne, the team's first-round pick this spring, the defensive line "can be a special group."

Around the locker room, the defensive players have become accustomed to Allen's questions. They come regularly now, delivered subtly at practices, in meetings or just sitting around locker stalls. He might ask a safety about his role on a coverage or a cornerback about how he defends a receiver. Such queries aren't normal for defensive linemen who, by the nature of their positions at the front of a defense, are only focused on the play before them, rarely curious about what happens behind.

"Jon will come to me and ask something like: 'If you do this, should I do that?' or 'If I do this, what will you do?'" linebacker Mason Foster said. "The more spots you know on a defense, the better you can understand what's going on outside of your own area."

Foster chuckles.

"He just loves football," Foster said. "That's one of the biggest things about him."

A few years ago, Richard Allen started telling Jonathan a story he once heard about Larry Bird. Back when Bird was a child, the story went, he was a slow, doughy kid in French Lick, Ind. The boy never imagined himself a basketball player, but one day his father drew an X on an outdoor basketball court and told him to hit 100 shots from that X. The next day he drew another, demanding another 100 makes. The day after that he drew yet another X. Then another and another and another, until Bird grew into one of the best basketball players ever.

"Ultimately the hard work paid off," Richard Allen said he told his son that day.

Now, all these years later, the father sees the Army that he drove into his son. Set a standard, set it high, and never let it go.

At '100 percent,' Jonathan Allen Ready To Give Defensive Line A Lift In Second Year

By Grant Cohen, Redskins.com
July 27, 2018

Going up against 300-pound offensive linemen seems like an insurmountable task. For defensive end Jonathan Allen, that was nothing compared to what he endured in 2017.

After earning a starting spot on the defensive line, the second-year player out of Anniston, Ala., suffered a Lisfranc injury during the fifth game of the season that sidelined him for the remainder of the year. Allen made it a priority to get back on the field during the offseason, determined to enhance what had become a promising start.

Now, back in Richmond at 100 percent, the 23-year-old looks for his tireless work ethic in recovery to translate over to the defense.

"Probably the hardest thing I've done," Allen said of his recovery process. "Even though I had surgeries before, I've never actually missed game time. It was definitely one of the hardest things I've ever had to do...It kind of gave me a renewed appreciation for what I do for a living. I just came back more grateful, ready to put in the extra hours that I might not have been able to do last year, might not have been willing to do last year. I'm just ready go."

Allen gained "confidence" early in the NFL, contributing two tackles per contest in the first five games of the season. When he hit IR, the Redskins struggled to keep the momentum going, going 1-4 in the next five games without the 6-foot-3 defensive end. A fully healthy Allen is locked in on staying that way so he can improve the defensive line throughout training camp.

"Really, [my focus is] just being able to be out there and help my guys," Allen said. "We had so many injuries last year and had guys out there fighting for their lives and almost beating themselves [up] when it was just a testament how well coached we were and strong willed the guys we had out there were. At least for me, I want to go out there and be able to help my guys contribute to the team."

Learning and watching from the sidelines did not satisfy Allen, who showed the will to get back on the field by working with the team trainers to seeing a chiropractor. His recovery process motivated his teammates to succeed for him on the field, defensive lineman Anthony Lanier II said.

While Lanier had the task of replacing Allen at his position at times, he admired the fact that he was putting effort into coming back even better for the 2018 campaign.

"I could tell that he wanted to be back out there with us and be back out there with the team," Lanier said. "Somebody like that you give a lot to because they're willing to do what's best for the team."

Now that he's healthy, Jonathan Allen sees no reason he can't dominate

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
August 5, 2018

RICHMOND — Dominate has become Jonathan Allen's favorite word. The second-year defensive lineman seems to say it an awful lot during training camp.

The plan for the upcoming season is clear after he lost all but five games of his rookie year to a Lisfranc injury.

"I definitely feel like everybody has personal goals, but for me it's just to dominate and be more consistent," Allen said. "I feel like I was, before I got hurt, I was playing at a pretty high level. But I want to be able to take that to the next level and be able to play like that every week, every game, and not have a good game or just an okay game. I want to be able to try to dominate every opponent, every snap, every game. So, when I say take it to the next level, I really mean consistency."

Allen posted 10 tackles and a sack in those five games, immediately improving the play of the defensive line. The defense allowed fewer than 100 yards rushing in four of those five games before devolving into the NFL's worst run defense without him. Allen said he got back to 100 percent healthy around March or April, and he has been a tough block during camp.

The No. 17 pick leaned on his natural ability as a rookie, but he's focused on the details even more now.

"For me, I feel like bending the corner," he said. "That's the big thing that I've been trying to focus on: being able to become more skinny on the edge, really just trying to take in all the little things that I really wasn't able to do last year just because I was so caught up in the moment. Really just trying to get a grasp on the playbook, the scheme, the technique. So this year I'm really trying to elevate my play and take it to the next level."

Coach Jay Gruden said Allen has a combination of "great hands" and "great strength," making him difficult to block in the run game, which in turn helps the linebackers run free to the ball. But Gruden is adamant, given questions about his pass-rush ability, that Allen's not a one-trick pony.

"We have very high expectations for Jonathan," Gruden said. "He is an excellent football player without a doubt. He's not a one-dimensional player at all. He plays the run equally well as he can rush the passer. He is a very tenacious guy, he loves football, prepares his tail off. [Defensive line coach Jim] Tomsula is doing a great job with him. I have no worries about Jonathan; the only thing is we just have to keep him on the field. He is going to be a great player."

There's hope that Allen's growth, plus the addition of 2018 No. 13 pick Daron Payne, will address the run-game issues. Third-year lineman Matt Ioannidis has lined up opposite Allen for much of camp and has had a strong showing as well.

The Redskins' defensive line hasn't had a reputation for dominance in recent seasons, but Allen's aspiration for 2018 is clear: Dominate.

LB PRESTON SMITH

By Chris Roling, Redskins Wire

RICHMOND - Washington Redskins linebacker Preston Smith might be one of the league's most underrated players.

While Smith isn't talking to the Redskins about a new contract, he has been flashing plenty of versatility during Redskins training camp.

In 72 coverage snaps last year, Edge Rusher Preston Smith was targeted eight times, allowed just 29 total yards and intercepted two passes.

It's an impressive number, and one fans might not expect right away from a player like Smith — he's better known for his 20.5 sacks over the last three seasons.

An iron man of sorts to go alongside his pass-rushing production, Smith figures to earn a hefty payday in free agency if the Redskins don't open up the checkbook.

Given his unique skill set in something like coverage, the Redskins can expect a huge season from Smith as he auditions for a new contract.

QB ALEX SMITH

Alex Smith comes to the Redskins with self-assurance as his strong suit

By Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post
July 21, 2018

Alex Smith is exhausted, but he refuses to show it. The moment is for them, the select few who have been chosen to witness the welcome to his new home.

The line of selfie-seekers snakes around the perimeter of the Washington Redskins' locker room at FedEx Field, funneling toward the large backdrop adorned with the team's name in small lettering. One by one, 200 fans draped in burgundy and gold step forward, offering a handshake and even an occasional hug. They have come to lay eyes on the new face of the franchise, the new quarterback in Jay Gruden's offense. To them, he is the future — and potentially Washington's football savior.

The man who so many saw as expendable is again wanted. But Smith no longer is burdened by insecurity or in need of affirmation. The former No. 1 overall NFL draft pick already has been written off as a potential bust, twice been discarded for shinier, younger quarterbacks. He has been praised for leading the San Francisco 49ers to the NFC title game and derided as "a game manager" — a solid, dependable quarterback who can't lift his team by himself. But none of that matters as he stands in his new locker room, surrounded by hundreds of fans.

"I don't feel like I have to prove myself to anybody any longer," Smith says shortly after the event has ended and fans and reporters have exited the stadium.

He is all but alone a few minutes later, sitting inside a coach's office near the entrance to his new locker room. Those who know him best already have warned of his reticence around reporters. But he appears at ease as his 6-foot-4 frame slowly sinks into the upholstery of one of two chairs positioned side by side in the small room. He then engages in a delicate dance that toes the line between unfiltered vulnerability and cautious restraint. After everything he has endured in San Francisco and Kansas City, the three-time Pro Bowl selection knows who he is. But there still is that part of him that would prefer to avoid moments where he's forced to pick at old wounds that have long since scabbed over.

"To be a No. 1 pick," he says, emphasizing his words by tapping his fist against the wooden desk in front of him. "... To come with tall expectations ... [tap] ... and then, through those first four, five years, to not win games ... [tap] ... to not turn around the organization ... [tap] ... and certainly, statistically ... [tap] ... to not play that great ... [tap] ... to have stretches but, certainly as a whole, not to have played that great ... that builds."

It took years for him to achieve a level of inner peace, to put aside lingering resentment and stop questioning the business side of the game. Smith rather would focus on what lies ahead and how excited he is to be a part of Gruden's "QB-friendly" system. But those moments of insecurity and self-doubt — and his journey to overcome outside perception of his worth — are vital to understanding Smith's mental makeup, his 14-year journey in the NFL and why members of the Redskins' staff are "tickled to death" to have this 34-year-old quarterback under center.

A college prodigy

Pam Smith used to wonder whether her son was destined for a life of crime. There were epic tantrums, intolerable behavior. And by the time Smith was 3, his parents were debating whether it was even worth it to take him out in public.

"I used to say, 'Alex will be a success at whatever he does because he is so focused and very stubborn. I hope he chooses something good versus robbing 7-Elevens because he'd be good at either,'" Pam recalls with a chuckle.

Smith is the third of their four children but was by far their "biggest challenge," his mother says. During those early years, when Smith often was banished to a corner in a timeout, she encouraged him to channel that headstrong energy in a positive way.

That stubborn streak proved to be one of Smith's greatest assets. The perfectionist in him could never tolerate mediocrity. He never will accept being outworked, be it in the classroom or on the field. Those same traits motivated him to sneak into coach Urban Meyer's late-night game-planning meetings during his time as Utah's starting quarterback.

"I turn on the lights, and Alex Smith is just sitting in there with us," says Meyer, who led the Utes to victories at the 2003 Liberty Bowl and the 2004 Fiesta Bowl with Smith as their starter. "... Not many players have I had that would do that."

The resolve that led Smith to snub Ivy League interest because he was determined to play big-time college football was just as evident in his quest to transform his gangly, 185-pound underclassman frame into an NFL-ready specimen. "I remember forcing him to make peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and stick them in his book bag so he'd be eating all day long," said Meyer, now Ohio State's head coach.

Smith's photographic memory [according to Meyer] and his high IQ earned him the nickname "Doogie Howser" — the child prodigy in a popular 1990s ABC sitcom — after he earned his degree in two years. His drive propelled him at age 20 to become the No. 1 pick in the 2005 draft.

"Everything he seemed to touch, he succeeded at," says Dan Mullen, Smith's position coach at Utah and Florida's current head coach.

2018 FEATURE CLIPS

The Guy again

In seven seasons in San Francisco, he had seven offensive coordinators and three head coaches. The toxic culture permeating the franchise in the beginning of his tenure filtered its way from the 49ers' fractured locker room and onto the field. Smith was besieged by doubt as the pressure mounted, and he was in need of reassurance.

"Probably several years back, I maybe needed to hear that," says Smith, whose 49ers teams were 11-19 in games he started during his first three seasons before he missed all of 2009 with a shoulder injury. "I think maybe just from the hole I dug myself as a young player. . . . Maybe I needed to hear that, any kind of validation.

"I was on some bad teams, and I played bad as a young player, certainly, at times. And that all mounts," Smith continues, staring ahead at the wall. "Yeah, that all mounts. The perception. Everything that goes into that. And so, yeah, I think to kind of get over the hump of that, to change perception, it can be difficult. It's a tall task. And it takes a long time."

The 2011 arrival of Jim Harbaugh as coach signaled a dramatic shift for the 49ers organization and for Smith, who went 13-3 and threw for more than 3,000 passing yards for the first time in his career to earn San Francisco its first playoff berth since 2002. The 49ers reached the NFC championship game, losing, 20-17 in overtime, to the eventual Super Bowl champion New York Giants. But the concussion Smith suffered midway through the following season paved the way for 2011 second-round pick Colin Kaepernick to assume the starting role even though Smith had led the 49ers to a 6-2 start.

Smith was traded to Kansas City in February 2013. Under Coach Andy Reid, Smith took a team that had tied for the NFL's worst record the year before to the first of four playoff appearances in five years. The Chiefs were 50-26 in his starts, and he had a career-best 104.7 passer rating in 2017 that led the NFL. History repeated itself, however, when the Chiefs drafted quarterback Patrick Mahomes in 2017 following a pair of disappointing division-round playoff losses, and it was evident Smith was on borrowed time.

That played right into Bruce Allen's hands. Eager to move on from quarterback Kirk Cousins after the 2017 season, the Redskins team president targeted Smith early in the offseason. Next was gauging Kansas City's interest in trading him. "We called," Allen said.

On Jan. 30, the teams agreed to terms of a trade and a new contract for Smith: a four-year, $94 million deal that includes $71 million guaranteed.

Just like that, Smith was back to being The Guy.

"He's a quiet leader, but there's just something about him that makes you want to step your game up even that much more," says Redskins running back Chris Thompson, who spotlights the quarterback's assertiveness in the huddle and Smith's low interception total (only five in 2017) rather than Smith's 2-5 postseason record. "I can't even pinpoint it. It's just that it's Alex Smith. You can't help but to get excited about it."

There's a perceptible change at Redskins Park. "I'm big on having a feel for people, and it's just different with him," Thompson says. "The locker room feels different. The guys feel different."

People always have been drawn to Smith.

He was the "pied piper" of the Utah football team, a magnetic force that could pull together a collection of Hawaiians, Samoans, kids from inner city Los Angeles and married Mormons, according to Mullen. "And that's how you maximize the individual talents on the team," Mullen says. "When you get them all working together because they can rally around this one person who unites them all."

Says Meyer: "The minute I heard Alex Smith is not good enough, I thought to myself, 'I will never, ever have a quarterback good enough then if this guy can't play in the NFL.'"

A sense of self

Jim Tomsula reluctantly picks up the phone. He hates doing this, but he's willing to make an exception for one special subject. "Yeah, I'll talk about Alex," the Redskins' defensive line coach says gruffly. "That's the only reason."

For 13 minutes, the typically tight-lipped assistant fills the air with saccharine sentiments about Smith's physical toughness and "pureness for playing football."

tive thing," says Tomsula, who served as a defensive line coach and interim head coach during Smith's 49ers tenure. "I'm not trying to make this like a fairy tale or something, but I'm just telling you: This guy is absolutely the kind of guy I'd want my daughter to marry."

Smith's former coaches agree: He hasn't gotten enough credit for what he has accomplished in his career. But Redskins staffers are eager to praise him. Defensive coordinator Greg Manusky, another former 49ers assistant, hails Smith as "a technician" when he picks apart defenses. Tomsula raves about the quarterback's mental toughness, noting that Smith "was put into some extremely difficult situations and never blinked."

According to Smith's inner circle, he's the same man he always was: Competitive. Brilliant. Driven. But it's evident he now possesses a sense of self that can't be rattled.

No longer is he carrying the burden of having to prove himself or questioning the course of his career. In what could be his final NFL act, he is embracing the opportunity to start anew in Washington. And he's eager to take another team to the playoffs.

"I enjoy the challenge of winning football games more than I ever have," Smith says. "I enjoy the challenge of coming together with my teammates and playing well for them.

Maybe 10 years ago I needed to hear [validation]. But at this point, the focus for me is on ball, I guess."

Redskins coaches take advantage of Alex Smith's vast experience

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
June 21, 2018

Much has been made of Alex Smith's experience and the battle scars he brings to the Washington Redskins. He's earned three Pro Bowl selections in 13 seasons and was a member of a Super Bowl team with the 49ers, where he worked under three coaches and six coordinators. Smith learned from three more offensive coordinators, including current Eagles Coach Doug Pederson, in five years with the Chiefs. Two highly rated offensive minds, Jim Harbaugh and Andy Reid, both groomed Smith.

The 49ers were putrid when Smith arrived, hence the organization having the No. 1 pick to select the quarterback, but they grew into a NFC champion. The Chiefs went to the playoffs in four of five seasons with Smith at the helm.

"When I was in Cleveland I coached Josh McCown and the one thing I learned real quick was you're wasting a lot of knowledge if you don't rely on those guys," O'Connell said. "And Alex has reps in a lot of different systems. . . . There's a lot of times we call a play, we execute it, we go in and watch the tape and he can call back to a play they either had in Kansas City or San Francisco and say, 'Hey, we might've read it like this or this is how we attacked this coverage.'"

The feedback has led to a number of small tweaks and changes by the Redskins to better tailor the offense to fit their new quarterback.

"Maybe it's a little tweak here and there that people may not notice, but from our standpoint in the system, it's a big deal to get it implemented," O'Connell said. "But we're doing that to make him as comfortable as we possibly can.

"Then there's other times where you say, 'No, we've really done it like this and here's why.' I think that's the key word, 'why.' Why are we doing the things we're doing offensively? If there's a better way to do it that he's done somewhere else, we'll incorporate that. But if we feel strongly about how we've done it here or how Jay's done it, even going back to his time in Cincinnati or Tampa, we're always trying to incorporate things to make what is a really good offensive system even better."

O'Connell was promoted during the offseason from quarterbacks coach to passing game coordinator and now has more input on the entire offense. The transition in 2018 will be significant with new playmakers at quarterback, wide receiver and running back.

yards) while the run game was 28th (90.5).

"The influence [has changed] on what this year's version of the Redskins are going to be with a new quarterback, with some new personnel, a guy like Paul Richardson, Derrius Guice," O'Connell said. "Obviously, from a standpoint of incorporating Jordan [Reed] back in, hopefully, full time and Chris Thompson coming back. We're trying to put together a system that maximizes everybody's skill sets.

"Obviously, Jay has had a ton of success calling plays in this league. But to not only learn from him, but for him to ask what do you like here or how would you guys have done [it] there at other stops as a player or coach? It's a constant round table of information to lead to putting these guys in the best possible situation. You only get so many shots at it. Once you establish a system, these guys learn it and you like to make things concrete so they can move forward with set rules and examples of how we want them to operate."

After years of instability, here's why Alex Smith is the QB Washington needs

By Terez Paylor, Yahoo.com
July 31, 2018

RICHMOND, Va. — A recent weekend practice has just begun at the Bon Secours Washington Redskins Training Center, but there's no defense on the field — just quarterback Alex Smith and his receivers.

They're running routes against air, meaning every throw should be on the money, every route should be perfect and every pass should be completed. Some of these receivers, Smith has never thrown to, and given the fact the 14-year veteran has been a Red-skin for only six months, he knows that every rep matters, especially if he's going to lead Washington from the depths of the rough-and-tumble NFC East.

Smith is locked in, treating this portion of practice with the focus and intensity it deserves, when his new coach, Jay Gruden, inexplicably breaks his concentration.

Gruden is deadpan, in the same sarcastic, funny way he has used to win over so many of his players over the past four years. It's something the 34-year-old Smith has gotten so accustomed to over the past several months, he immediately bursts into laughter when quizzed about it.

"Jay has got a great sarcastic edge to him, always, and nobody's off limits, and I think guys appreciate that about him," Smith told Yahoo Sports. "From the shoes I had on when I first got here to my shirt being tucked in, he's quickly and constantly finding ways to jab you, and it's very similar to [Kansas City Chiefs coach] Andy [Reid], who was the same way."

$94 million and a place that wanted Alex Smith

For Redskins fans, this is a good thing. Smith loved playing for Reid, Reid loved coaching Smith. From 2013-2017, their football union resulted in a 50-26 regular-season record with Smith as a starter. The year-to-year improvement for the No. 1 overall pick of the 2005 draft allowed Smith, a three-time Pro Bowler, to finally shed the bust label.

What the two could not accomplish together, however, was an appearance in the AFC championship game. With Smith under center, the Chiefs went 1-4 in the playoffs, with the last two coming via disheartening home losses to Pittsburgh and Tennessee in the wildcard round as the Chiefs' offense failed to come up with enough big plays to win either.

With the most recent defeat, a 22-21 loss to Tennessee in which Kansas City blew an 18-point second-half lead, it became clear the salary-cap strapped Chiefs needed to shake things up. A night before the Pro Bowl in late January, Reid called Smith and told him they were ready to deal him to Washington, provided he and his agent, Tom Condon, could hammer out a long-term deal with the Redskins.

Contract negotiations for quarterbacks can be contentious, but Smith — who had dealt with several months of uncertainty about his future following the Chiefs' decision to select former Texas Tech gunslinger Patrick Mahomes in the first round of the previous draft — was thrilled to go to a team that wanted him. He told Condon not to dawdle, and only days later, they hammered out a five-year, $94 million deal before news of the trade leaked to The Kansas City Star.

"It's a [expletive]-ton of money, man," Smith says now, with a chuckle. "Haggling over $2 million more or something? Nah. I've played a long time. Let's get fair market value and let's go. Get it done."

The Redskins, who were prepared to lose starting quarterback Kirk Cousins to free agency after two drama-filled seasons revolving around his contract situation, were equally thrilled to get something done. This was evidenced by the fact they not only called the Chiefs first, but were also willing to surrender a 2018 third-round pick and 23-year-old Kendall Fuller — one of the game's best young slot corners — to make it happen.

WR JAMISON CROWDER

Jamison Crowder-Alex Smith connection starting to flourish for Redskins

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
July 29, 2018

RICHMOND — If there's a competition in the wide receivers' room to become Alex Smith's favorite target, Jamison Crowder has taken the early lead.

The slot receiver has been open throughout training camp, and he and his quarterback seem to have developed some quick chemistry. Smith has finished in the top 10 in the NFL in completion percentage the past four seasons, including third in 2017 at 67.5 percent. In other words, he will find the open man, and Crowder has been that guy.

"Jamison is a quarterback's dream as far as getting open in the slot and being a great target for him, a friendly target," Coach Jay Gruden said. "He plays a lot bigger than his size. He has very long arms, very athletic."

Smith always has been adept at working the intermediate and underneath routes — the crossing routes and outs at which Crowder specializes. The 5-foot-9, 177-pounder isn't running many go-routes.

"I'm just trying to continue to do what I can do to be in the right positions and make him a friendly target," Crowder said. "I really don't know what it is. We made some plays since the start of this camp. I think we all have a good connection with Alex, and as we continue to go forward, it's going to continue to grow, and we'll be ready once the season gets here.

"It's just reps and film study. Going out there and repping it with the quarterback, then going back and watching film and just talking over some things we can do better. Or things that we can do where we can have that connection."

Crowder caught 66 passes for 789 yards and three touchdowns in 2017, slightly down from his 67 receptions for 847 yards and seven touchdowns in 2016. Smith will spread the ball around to a talented group of receivers in Josh Doctson, Paul Richardson Jr. and Jordan Reed, but Crowder could be on the verge of a monster year.

"He can make them cuts and in and out of his breaks so fast, it can mess with you," linebacker Zach Brown said. "Now he got a lot better at running his routes.

"Alex knows. Alex is Alex. If you're open, he's going to give you the ball."

Added cornerback Quinton Dunbar: "I feel like Jamison is one of the best slot receivers in the league. I mean, he's just quick, smart, deceptive, and he's just got a feel for finding holes in the defense and getting away from defenders."

S D.J. SWEARINGER

The Redskins Have Continuity At Safety,
And It Starts With D.J. Swearinger Sr.

By Andre Earls, Redskins.com
July 31, 2018

In the National Football League, continuity at any position isn't easily attained. Which is why when head coach Jay Gruden was asked how it felt to have the same two safeties start at the position for the second straight year, he didn't mince words.

"Very exciting," Gruden said. "We've had a tough time here finding the safeties. With D.J. [Swearinger Sr.] coming back for his second year, Montae [Nicholson] coming back for his second year, De-shazor [Everett] been here now two or three years, so he's got some great experience with going out there. It's a great thing to have, you know, some experienced safeties back there."

That comfort level has only enhanced with Swearinger, the vocal leader of the defense, who has marked his place at the top of the Redskins defensive totem pole entering his second season in Washington.

The Washington Redskins conducted their fifth day of training camp practice Tuesday, July 31, 2018 at Bon Secours Washington Redskins Training Center in Richmond, Va.

For some, Swearinger's energetic approach to the game might take adjusting to. But don't ask Swearinger if he thinks he should tone it down, because for him, that's basically a sign of disrespect. When asked whether his teammates have ever called him "too intense" during practice, the veteran defensive back was very brash with his reaction.

"Never," he scoffed. "That would never be the case."

For Swearinger, playing football with high vocal intensity is the only option. The trash talking and jabs between plays are just layers of icing on the cake.

During a morning press conference, Gruden made it extremely clear that communication on defense is of the utmost importance, and that a lot of that starts with the 26-year-old free safety.

"I think he is doing a great job," Gruden said. "He's a great communicator, very emotional player you know. Talk about talking trash, this guy is one of the best that I have ever seen. Pulling his helmet, yelling, ticking off the offense. They [defensive backs] have to be fundamentally sound, know where they're going, and D.J. is a big part of that for us to have success."

Being a part of an array of defensive schemes, Swearinger recognizes the importance of consistent communication on his side of the football. One way he's approached developing the younger talent is by taking a step back and forcing them to be more verbal during team drills.

"It's kind of hard for me to not communicate" the veteran explained. "I try to let [Nicholson], hear him a lot, sometimes I try to not say anything so I can get it out of him, but ultimately it's just me being a leader. As we progress he's definitely getting better, but I'm going to stay on him, he's my little brother so he'll get there."

After a rookie season riddled with injuries, Nicholson is preparing to make good on all expectations in 2018. When asked if he had an increased sense of comfort knowing that he was the likely starter going into the season, he was quick to retort.

"No," he said. "I prepare like I'm the last person on the depth chart. I'm asking questions to D.J., to Coach [Torrian] Gray. Really, that's just the way that I've been. You've got to prepare like you're the last man on the chart. I've got to have that chip on my shoulder, essentially."

Skins' D.J. Swearinger, Montae Nicholson look for cohesion heading into second season

By Kendra Andrews, The Washington Post
July 29, 2018

RICHMOND — Standing in the red zone during Day 4 of training camp, Redskins safety D.J. Swearinger barked at his teammates, both offensive and defensive. The expletive-filled rants were intended to fire up his fellow defenders and to send a message to the offense.

"The offense and defense, you don't have to like each other during camp," Swearinger said. "We shouldn't like each other during camp."

On one play, he jumped in to back up Montae Nicholson after his fellow safety got into it with running back Byron Marshall. This might become a usual occurrence in the upcoming season.

According to Coach Jay Gruden, Swearinger and Nicholson are on the fast track to start for the Redskins this season — something that provides Gruden with some comfort surrounding that position.

"We're excited," Gruden said. "We've had a tough time here finding safeties. When I first got here we tried to get a better leader back there ... but now with D.J. coming back for a second year and Montae coming back for a second year ... it's a great thing to have, some experienced safeties back there. Now, you can draft someone you can develop ... the safety position is something we feel good about, compared to years past when we're holding on."

The duo of Swearinger and Nicholson will be a new one. Swearinger joined the Redskins last season after playing two seasons with the Arizona Cardinals. Nicholson was a rookie a year ago, but was held back a bit with a shoulder injury and concussion issues.

Because of that, the two don't share the cohesion that a number of the league's top safeties share.

"It's extremely important," Swearinger said. "Any of the good safeties in the league, they've been together three or four years, five years ... I guess you can say any other safeties that are good, they've been around each other for a while and this will be my first year to go back from last year to this year and have the same safeties."

Swearinger pointed to Andrew Sendejo and Harrison Smith of the Minnesota Vikings, who have been playing together since 2012, as an example of the kind of relationship he wants to develop with Nicholson.

"Hopefully, we will be better chemistry-wise. You know, that's what were working on right now in camp. We just got to take it one day at a time and keep the chemistry going. Hopefully, we will be one of the best."

DL TIM SETTLE & CB GREG STROMAN

Together Again, Tim Settle And Greg Stroman
Begin Life With The Redskins

By Jake Kring-Schreifels, Redskins.com
May 15, 2018

The statistics of high school players making the NFL are extremely low. The statistics of high school teammates making the NFL and playing for the same organization are, let's just say, nearly impossible.

And yet, following their first Redskins rookie minicamp practice, there were defensive lineman Tim Settle and cornerback Greg Stroman, the pair of Stonewall Jackson High School teammates fielding questions beside each other just a couple of weeks after being drafted by Washington in the 2018 NFL Draft.

As improbable as that scenario might sound, it might also be the most understandable. A year after Stroman graduated high school and began playing football at Virginia Tech, Settle followed him there, continuing their bond that has now lifted them into the professional ranks. At every level, they have been together.

"After he got picked, my family kind of in-house was like 'What if it happens?'" Stroman said. "It's kind of like we spoke it into existence. It was exciting to hear the news and now we've just got to play."

The Redskins drafted Settle in the fifth round to further bulk up their defensive line, which was instantly improved with the addition of Daron Payne in the first round. Two picks later in the sixth round, the Redskins took Stroman, adding more depth to the cornerback position and potentially adding a challenger at punt returner.

2018 FEATURE CLIPS

Beside each other, their body shape couldn't be more different, but their shared history has made the first week with their new team more comfortable. They're currently sharing the same hotel room and can lean on their families not too far away – Settle is from Manassas while Stroman is from Bristow.

"It's been easier to have somebody with me," Settle said. "I'm not alone, even though we're from this area, me and Greg always been close, so you know, us just bonding together, going over the playbook, I was telling myself, I bet I know this more than you. You can do stuff with him. I can joke with him because I know how he is, I know his personality, I grew up with him. It's just easier, it's fun."

The two of them hadn't really considered this a possibility, but are happy to have each other during the upcoming OTAs as they mix it up with veteran players.

"We work good together and that's been the trend," Settle said.

Both know that they'll have good chances to make the squad by the end of training camp and the preseason. They also know they can't look ahead too far as they begin to learn a new vocabulary of plays and game plans at a much faster rate than in college.

The past weekend was good primer for them, a test of their memory retention and information processing.

"It's just more work," Stroman said. "It's nothing we're not used to, just come in, learn and work. Do what coach asks and make sure you learn everything and do everything you're asked."

Settle has the same mindset as he prepares to work extensively with defensive line coach Jim Tomsula over the coming months, improving footwork and agility as he adjusts at the next level.

"Play your role, do what you have to do," Settle said. "Everybody on the team has a job. Doing our job is the best thing we can do to help this organization, this club as well. That's just all it's about. As long as you're making your plays, as long as you're doing what you're supposed to do, you're going to stay in the league for a long time."

With any luck, Settle and Stroman will be around a long time together, a potential result of fate and accountability.

"He'll let me know I've got to work, and I'll let him know he's got to work," Settle said. "We don't beat around the bush. We keep it 100 with each other."

Former Hokies teammates shine in Redskins preseason opener

By Michael Phillips, Richmond Times-Dispatch
August 9, 2018

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. - A day that started with nerves ended with success for the newest members of the Washington Redskins.

Former Virginia Tech teammates Tim Settle and Greg Stroman each made highlight plays in a preseason loss to the New England Patriots, furthering their cause to make the roster.

Settle, a defensive lineman, called suiting up for the Redskins "a dream come true."

"I got out there and looked around and everything, and I was like, 'Wow, it's so surreal,'" he said. "After a while I got comfortable."

"Now it's time for another milestone."

Settle got one of the day's longest stretches of action, as the Patriots held the ball for the bulk of the third quarter.

"I like Settle," Redskins coach Jay Gruden said. "Settle made some plays over there. Did a nice job. Played a lot of minutes too. ... I thought he handled it pretty well for his first game."

CB JOSH NORMAN

Josh Norman goes on shopping spree for immigrant children released from detention centers

By Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post
June 27, 2018

Together they patrolled the aisles, grabbing item after item and placing them in cart after cart. The time — 3 a.m. Central — was of no concern to Josh Norman as he gathered as many toys as he could possibly fit in both arms.

The mission was clear. Fatigue and thoughts of football would have to wait.

The Washington Redskins cornerback and New Orleans Saints linebacker Demario Davis made a trip to a San Antonio Walmart to purchase toys, book bags and other items that they personally handed out on Tuesday to immigrant children who were separated at the border from their parents and later released from family detention centers.

Norman and Davis, who both have been outspoken on social-justice issues in the past, chronicled their volunteerism on social media.

"We're here to save the world," said Davis, as Norman recorded the Walmart shopping spree.

After filling up several shopping carts at Walmart, the Norman and Davis sifted through the items and put together care packages for the children. Then they set off to put some smiles on some young faces.

Norman and Davis, who were introduced to the families through a translator upon their arrival, handed out dozens of backpacks as well as 20 boxes of pizza.

"I don't care how much the world hates," Davis later tweeted, "I will always choose love. #BorderChildren"

Cat and mouse games: Norman seeing Smith's accuracy firsthand

By Matthew Paras, The Washington Times
July 29, 2018

RICHMOND — Josh Norman laughed, saying he was frustrated. Now having to face quarterback Alex Smith in practice, the Redskins cornerback said he hasn't been "getting any work." The veteran passer either avoids Norman completely — or is deadly accurate when he does decide to throw his way. As a result, Norman hasn't received many opportunities to make a play on the ball. "He's so precise right now, so he's not making mistakes," Norman said.

"That's the most frustrating thing to a defensive back — you're in great position, you get there to the top of the route and you're ready for a play to be made and it doesn't come. But on the ones you are a little step behind on and you're almost there to make, he throws it." In theory, Smith's experience in knowing how to avoid mistakes should help the Redskins. Last season with the Kansas City Chiefs, Smith threw just five interceptions despite recording 505 passing attempts. The 34-year-old is also a very accurate passer, completing 67.5 percent of his attempts. Norman called Smith a veteran, adding he just "knows football." "It's those games," Norman said. "Cat and mouse. Cat and mouse games. It just sucks when you're the mouse."

Josh Norman's advocacy, willingness to give provides optimism for the future

By Paul Woody, Richmond Times-Dispatch
August 16, 2018

In 2016, Josh Norman hit the lottery.

He had honed his ability and reached the upper echelon of NFL cornerbacks, which is a highly lucrative echelon. When the Carolina Panthers decided they had better ways to spend their money than to sign Norman to a long-term deal, he became a free agent.

And that's when Norman cashed in his winning ticket.

That's not entirely fair. Winning a lottery is a matter of luck. Norman, a fifth-round draft choice from Coastal Carolina, reached the peak of his profession because of his skill and work ethic. Even after he and the Washington Redskins agreed on a five-year, $75 million contract, with $50 million guaranteed, he regularly is the last player off the field.

2018 FEATURE CLIPS

That's not because he moves slowly after a two-hour workout. It's because after a two-hour practice, he puts in 20-30 more minutes of work to keep his skills sharp.

And after he finished his extra work during training camp, he regularly walked to the sidelines where fans were waiting and signed and signed autographs.

Norman gives everything of himself to the Redskins and gives back to those who support the Redskins.

But he does more than that.

Norman is in the wave of professional athletes who are making significant financial contributions to their communities.

"More athletes need to get involved," Norman said. "If more athletes set aside the materialistic things and look at something that can help someone else, oh my gosh, what a changed community, what a changed United States we can become.

"I feel like there will be [more athletes involved]. It will be the new thing. It will become the thing you do and are known for doing. I was just looking at it as helping somebody out, helping the next man because that's what it's all about. It's not about me or you or what we have or what we can do. It's about what we can give and not receive."

In November last year, Norman took out a full-page ad in the Greenwood, S.C., Index-Journal newspaper, inviting local churches to send him a letter outlining the needs of the youth in their congregations. Norman said he wouldn't be able to fulfill every request, but said he would do his "very best."

"The mail was insane," said Alison St. Clair, executive assistant to Norman. "I had paper cuts from opening it."

Norman sent checks for more than $250,000, all from his bank accounts, to the churches in Greenwood.

Norman donated $100,000 to Puerto Rico as the country continues to recover from Hurricane Maria.

Before training camp began this summer, Norman looked at what was happening along the southern border of the United States, where children in families attempting to enter the country illegally were being separated from their parents.

Norman and New Orleans Saints linebacker DeMario Davis, who are members of the Players Coalition, which supports social justice causes, went to San Antonio. They arrived late in the night and immediately went to a local big-box store, where they shopped from 11:30 p.m. until 3:30 a.m., spending about $10,000 on supplies, among them, toiletries, water, snacks, blankets, soccer balls and backpacks.

Norman and Davis then spent several hours in the parking lot of their hotel stuffing the backpacks. Working with the Refugee and Immigrant Center for Education and Legal Services, Norman and Davis distributed the backpacks to children later that day.

That's an unusual day and no small amount of money.

"Yeah, it's not normal," Norman said. "I just feel like I have a duty to the people in general, it doesn't matter if you're black, white, yellow. I just have a duty to serve you in any kind of capacity."

Norman's work is an example of the heightened awareness many professional athletes have for the less fortunate morphing almost into a competition among high-caliber, highly paid athletes to do the most good for as many as possible.

In Akron, Ohio, NBA superstar LeBron James, in a public-private partnership with Akron schools, opened the I Promise school for 240 at-risk third- and fourth-graders. The benefits to children, and families, in the program, including tuition to the University of Akron for graduates, are impressive.

Derrick Rose, a Chicago native and now a guard with the Minnesota Timberwolves, announced a $400,000 donation to provide college tuition for "Rose Scholars." This was on top of the $1 million he donated in 2014 to After School Matters, a Chicago-based advocacy program for teenagers that, among other things, helps arrange internships, apprenticeships and assistantships.

Redskins linebacker Ryan Kerrigan has donated tens of thousands of dollars through his charitable foundation. Offensive tackle Morgan Moses has helped fund online tutoring for students in high schools in Richmond and Northern Virginia.

"Other athletes are looking around and thinking this is a time when I need to step up," Norman said. "I feel like they should, if they haven't already. We're in perilous times now."

Norman's dream project involves building a recreation center in Greenwood, his hometown. When he was growing up, he went to a rec center almost every day after school and through the summers. It was an important part of his life and development.

"I feel like now is the time something needs to be done, especially in my county," Norman said. "It's too far gone and too much time has been lost. We will do things."

Norman realizes this is a long-term, multimillion-dollar project. Land must be purchased. Designs have to be drawn. He'd like to pay for it entirely out of his personal funds. He also knows that might not be realistic, so he'll need to find a partner. He has at least one in mind.

"It's a five- to 10-year plan for STARZ24 [his foundation]," Norman said. "And now it's coming to life.

"We try to do our best. That's all you can do. Keep your head down and keep working for the people."

Doesn't sound like Norman and his colleagues are keeping their heads down. Sounds more as if they're holding their heads high and keeping their eyes, and bank accounts, wide open.

RB ROB KELLEY

Redskins running back 'Fit Rob' Kelley slimmed down ahead of pivotal third season

By Sam Fortier and Kimberley A. Martin, The Washington Post

RICHMOND — Call him "Fit Rob."

For Rob Kelley, the old "Fat Rob" is gone, melted away. The nickname, which he said he earned "eating a lot of food" before his senior year at Tulane, was once inscribed on his backpack by his running backs coach. At the end of his senior year, Kelley said he weighed 249 pounds, but when Washington signed him as an undrafted free agent in 2016, he was listed at 228. Now he's slimmed down again.

"It comes with the change within," he said Thursday. "I'm lighter, I'm faster. ... I'm 221 pounds."

Kelley demurred when asked about not being called "Fat Rob" anymore, saying he just wants to play and anyone who called him that nickname was just "their opinion."

Last season, Kelley struggled with injuries but started all seven games he appeared in and totaled 194 yards on 62 carries with three touchdowns. Against Minnesota in November, Kelley sprained his medial collateral ligament in his knee and aggravated an already sprained ankle, causing him to miss the rest of the season.

Now, he's healthy and back with a new look. He cut his hair as a physical representation that this year, actions mean more than words.

"It was time for a change," Kelley said. "I think it was like a bold statement showing that I'm ready to change, rather than just coming in and talking about it how much I'm going to change."

To succeed, Kelley needs to stay on the field. His injury history cannot be a predictor of his present. On Thursday, he took the lion's share of the first-team reps and he does not want to relinquish them to others in the team's loaded running back room.

Along with Kelley, the Redskins have Samaje Perine, the 2017 fourth-rounder out of Oklahoma; Chris Thompson, who has totaled 60-plus carries for the team the last two seasons; Byron Marshall, who the team signed last year off Philadelphia's practice squad; and Derrius Guice, this year's second-round pick from LSU. The Redskins also have two other backs, Martez Carter and Kapri Bibbs, trying to make the roster.

Coach Jay Gruden was noncommittal when asked which running back would garner the majority of the carries. He said "that's a great question" and said the team still needs to settle on "one, one and a half ... or two guys" to get the bulk of the carries, and that the team would probably only dress three on game day.

"The preseason games will tell a lot," he added. "They've all proven they're worthy of getting the ball, you know, now it's just a matter of trying to find the one that's most." He paused. "That could change week to week. You know, who knows."

2018 FEATURE CLIPS

Kelley has worked on special teams and his pass-catching to add value and not allow defenses to expect a pass only when Thompson comes into the huddle.

"You close the offense down, basically, if you can't catch the ball," he said.

Kelley added that he hopes to make a few runs and catches in training camp that catch his coaches' eyes and shows them he's fully recovered from his injuries. He also wants to prove he can take care of his body, and he changed up his approach this offseason to focus on prevention as much as anything else. He sees the players around him and understands what he has to do now.

"It's the team's job to keep on getting competition, to keep pushing the envelope, so, I mean, it doesn't make a difference," Kelley said. "[I've] still got to work as hard as I can. ... There's always a competition, whether you think it or not."

LB RYAN KERRIGAN

By Chris Roling, Redskins Wire
July 26, 2018

Washington Redskins edge rusher Ryan Kerrigan is the top name in jersey sales as the team heads into training camp Thursday.

According to Jared Goldstein of NBC Sports Washington, Kerrigan is the top-ranked Redskins player on the DICKS Sporting Goods Jersey Report, ranked 28th overall. He's sixth overall among defensive players.

It's not hard to see why Redskins fans love the pass rusher, as he keeps working his way up the record books:

This year Ryan Kerrigan needs eight sacks to get to 82.5 for his career and move past Charles Mann into second place on the #Redskins all-time sack list. Dexter Manley is the career leader with 91.

RB DERRIUS GUICE

Derrius Guice says Redskins running backs are enjoying themselves amid competition

By Kendra Andrews and Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
July 31, 2018

The Redskins don't have a shortage of running backs. That's probably a good thing for a team that ranked 28th in the NFL in rushing yards in 2017. Derrius Guice is the center of attention at training camp after Washington selected him in the second round with the No. 59 overall pick in this year's draft.

But Guice, who is vying with Chris Thompson and Rob Kelley for a starting job, said it's a friendly competition.

"We are all just out there having fun," the former LSU star said. "We are all there for each other. We are all uplifting each other. We don't really see it as competition. We are just out there making sure everybody knows what's going on, everybody knows what they're supposed to be doing."

Guice said his acclimation to the organization was a fairly simple process.

"It's all about adjusting. Football is a game of adjusting," he said. "You are going to play in different climates, and you are going to be around different people — people getting cut, people getting traded. You just got to figure out who guys are and figure out how to act around them. Some guys take everything serious all the time, and some guys you can play around with. ... Always have to know your audience."

Thompson, who is going into his sixth NFL season, and Kelley, who is entering his third, are two players Guice has gotten to know well.

In fact, Guice tells Thompson, who is back after recovering from a fractured right fibula, not to fake it if he's not feeling well because, Guice said, "I can tell if he's hurting. I can tell by his face."

With each player participating in different drills at different times during camp, Guice says it's hard to know where everyone stands and what roles each player will take once the regular season begins. Instead of focusing on that, Guice is working on his own game.

"I'm actually picking things up quicker than I thought I would," the rookie said. "I'm actually out there going full speed like the other guys. I'm not just going through the motions. The speed of the game changes, but if you know what's going on, it actually slows itself down. It's just fast when you don't know what's going on."

For fans, playing Fortnite with Redskins' Derrius Guice is 'just like talking to your friend'

By Sam Fortier, The Washington Post
August 3, 2018

One day in late June, Derrius Guice switched on the webcam in his bedroom. The Redskins rookie running back, perhaps better known to younger fans by his PlayStation gamertag, "Dhasickest," broadcasts regularly and has more than 4,000 followers on Twitch, a video-game streaming platform. Within seconds of him going live, the chat exploded with comments.

Many dropped an acronym for "Hail to the Redskins," and they asked him questions, like where he lives (at the time, still Baton Rouge) and how many rushing touchdowns he wanted this season ("I don't like to think about that stuff").

The scene of Guice's room during streams — friends sitting on his bed to watch him play, his mom popping in and out ("Shoutout my mama!") — plays out in homes nationwide, famous athletes or not, and the familiarity makes him accessible. Or at least it feels that way.

"[Streamers] are right there," said Nathan Grayson, a writer for gaming website Kotaku. "The world of celebrity was one far beyond normal people and what they could comprehend, whereas Twitch and YouTube say, 'Okay, well, here are these normal people who are famous.' ... It's a reaction to what celebrity culture used to be, which was this very gated-off thing."

Guice has only ever streamed himself playing Fortnite, the massive multiplayer online first-person shooter game that drops 100 cartoon players on a shrinking island and goes until only one player is left alive. On this night, he wanted to raise money for a local cancer center. Guice offered to play Fortnite with anyone who donated $5. Larger donations entered viewers into raffles for his gear.

In one game, Guice landed at "Tilted Towers," an infamous spot on the map, but struggled to find the loot he needed to better equip his character. Eventually, he ran into another player, who started shooting at him. Guice scrambled, building walls and trying to run away, but eventually he jumped directly into the path of a shotgun blast. He was eliminated.

"I ain't gettin' nothin'!" Guice yelled, declaring it a warmup game.

Video games are a normal downtime activity for Guice, as well as for many professional athletes and young people across the globe. Yet gaming was also linked to why some NFL teams were concerned about drafting him in April.

In the lead-up to the draft, reporters cited anonymous sources calling Guice "immature," at least partly because he posted often on social media and was "addicted to video games." Throughout, Guice's camp dismissed the reports, his high school coach going as far to say Guice was just "a new millennial athlete" and that future prospects would resemble him in their social-media usage. Six running backs were selected ahead of Guice, who was considered by many analysts to be one of the two or three best rushers in the draft.

Many teams across all sports are worried about their athletes becoming addicted to video games. Redskins Coach Jay Gruden is not one of the worried. He said he "used to play [video games] all the time,” but doesn’t anymore.

Redskins Coach Jay Gruden said that he does not worry about the video game habits of Guice or any of his players. (Jonathan Newton/The Washington Post)

“If I graded somebody now because of video games, I probably wouldn’t have a football team out here,” Gruden said before practice Thursday. “Everybody plays video games [in] this day and age. This Fortnite thing is going crazy, Madden, you know, they’re playing [FIFA] in there. They all play it. So, Derrius is probably most known for it, for some reason, but that had no bearing whatsoever on us taking him or not taking him.”

Guice developed a gaming habit as a kid, he said, because he wanted to avoid the streets of his Baton Rouge neighborhood known as “The Bottom,” where his father was murdered.

The backlash has made Guice more reticent to speak about his passion for gaming and broadcasting. He has not streamed since Redskins training camp began, and to those who still don’t understand why he plays, Guice has nothing to say.

“I just don’t [defend myself] anymore,” he said. “I had to throughout the draft process, but now that I’m in the league, I don’t have to anymore.”

The criticism did not change Guice. The longer his late June session on Twitch lasted, the more donations poured in. In 24 hours, more than $4,000 was raised. Osman Torres, 21, a Louisiana-based car dealership business manager, was not surprised.

Torres started following Guice’s streams after rooting for him at LSU. He was impressed that Guice seemed the same on Twitch as he did in on-field interviews, that nothing he did seemed “forced, or like a PR move.” The more he watched, the more he felt like he knew the running back. Watching Guice stream, Torres said, was “really just like talking to your friend.”

Within 11 days, Guice would hit his $20,000 goal, but at one moment during the session, he stopped thinking about the donations. A user named “wholeftcurry30” had written in the chat: “Bro why u compare working out to kneeling for the flag lol cmon fam think.”

Last year, Guice compared “the disrespect” of kneeling in protest during the national anthem to posting gym selfies, because he and his teammates “sacrifice” every day in the gym and yet people didn’t take working out seriously. That was, he said, “disrespectful to us.”

Guice sighed. He always reads the chat. He addressed the commenter and quickly became animated, saying he had been misunderstood and that the comparison didn’t matter anymore, but the issue did.

He paused, then couldn’t help himself: “You probably one of those people that don’t even understand why they [expletive] kneel for the flag anyway, so don’t come at me with that [expletive]. ... They killing black folks out here, but you worried about Snappin’ at the gym.”

His frustration didn’t feel staged, and his raw emotion and language felt like intimate insight into his mind. This was the magic of real-time streams: no script, no filter, none of the trappings of traditional celebrity culture.

Soon the chat became a referendum on protest and patriotism, reflecting a conversation happening far beyond Guice’s bedroom. Guice, however, had stopped participating, having turned his attention back to the game. He’d once again run into someone trying to shoot him.

WR PAUL RICHARDSON, JR.

Redskins show off deep passing game between Alex Smith and Paul Richardson

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
August 1, 2018

RICHMOND -- Speed was the most commonly used word in Paul Richardson’s scouting report when the Washington Redskins signed him in free agency this offseason, but that wasn’t all that was on display Wednesday.

The new $40 million man showed off his hands and some toughness on what may have been his best practice of training camp. He had a reception of about 30 yards when he ran past Josh Norman and outstretched parallel to the ground to haul in an Alex Smith pass. The 6-foot, 170-pounder got behind another pair of defensive backs earlier, but Smith overthrew him. He added another touchdown in a short-yardage period where he put a nasty outside-in move on cornerback Quinton Dunbar after bouncing back from getting the wind knocked out of him a couple of plays earlier. Richardson had another diving catch for about 20 yards during the workout.

“I’m comfortable every day,” Richardson said. “I’ve been comfortable since I got here. We’re just connecting, making plays. I see the ball and try to go get it.

“We’re just throwing it more. We see a lot of things on film we want to get to. I think today was a day we really wanted to make a point to get to those things. Alex made it a priority to throw some of those corner routes, throw some of those deep balls, and we connected.”

Many observers continue to be skeptical about Smith’s ability to throw the deep ball, but that hasn’t been an issue during camp.

The top three wide receivers of Richardson, Jamison Crowder, and Josh Doctson (who went down with a shoulder injury during practice, but later tweeted “#imgood”) have all had strong camps, but there’s a bit of a gap between them and the rest of the rotation. Maurice Harris, Brian Quick, Robert Davis and Trey Quinn have all had their moments, but the team kept just six receivers last season. Some won’t make the 53-man roster, and special teams ability will play a role in that decision.

“Very important, if one guy can stand out on special teams, then that’s your fourth — period,” Coach Jay Gruden said. “You know, we understand that we have to improve on special teams instead of just saying that on the podium or in meeting rooms, we’re going to have to commit to it by maybe keeping somebody that is better on special teams, but maybe not quite as polished at receiver.

“A lot of teams do that, but usually your fourth guy is going to be more of a true wide receiver. Your fifth guy could more in that role. So, we’ll have to wait and see even as a backup returner, a flier or whatever it might be.”

TE VERNON DAVIS

The story of Vernon Davis’ wedding proposal, which featured the beach and skydivers

By Peter Hailey, NBC Sports Washington
July 30, 2018

If you’re thinking about proposing to your significant other anytime soon, do yourself a favor: Don’t let that significant other see the video of Vernon Davis’ proposal. In mid-July, the Redskins tight end popped the question to his now-fiancee, Kayla, on the beach in Ocean City, Md. And just to ensure that Kayla would remember the moment forever, Davis enlisted the help of — because why not? — skydivers, too. “I had a dream about it,” Davis said at training camp following a practice when asked how he settled on such an elaborate plan. “She showed me some ideas of different proposals a long time ago and right after she showed me that night I had a dream about the skydivers.”

Following that dream, No. 85 explained that he used his resources and reached out to a friend to help set up the aerial side of things (after all, as everyone knows, you have to have a friend who has a strong connection to skydivers). “It just worked,” he said. Yep, it sure did. As you can see in that video that shows the whole process, once the skydivers landed, they took off their gear and revealed shirts that said, “Will you marry me?” Of course, Kayla said yes, and Davis proceeded to give her a rock that was bigger than many that were on the OC beach that day.

In terms of how he felt during it all, Davis admitted he was a little nervous, comparing it to his emotions on a game day. And for those who are now inspired to try and top what he pulled off, the veteran has three words for you. “Bring it on.”

Vernon Davis thrilled to be reunited with Alex Smith; Redskins lock up O-linemen

By Kareem Copeland, The Washington Post
April 16, 2018

Vernon Davis was clearly excited to reconnect with Alex Smith, his newest, and former, teammate as the first phase of the Redskins' voluntary offseason workout program began on Monday. The Redskins tight end did not mince words when asked about his impressions of the team's new quarterback.

"His game has elevated dramatically," Davis said. "And I say that because of his ability to get in and out of the pocket, he's getting the ball downfield, he's just placing the ball where it needs to be and he's doing it effectively. So, with that being said, he's only getting better. He is going into his 14th season and to see him playing the way he's playing is unbelievable.

"His mental capacity, his ability to fight through tough times and get through those moments is tremendous. He's been that way since he was in San Francisco and it actually seems like he's gotten better at that as well and I applaud him for that."

Smith and Davis were teammates for seven seasons with the San Francisco 49ers and the pass catcher has watched the veteran quarterback evolve throughout his first 13 NFL years. The best season of Davis' career came with Smith in 2009 when he earned his first Pro Bowl appearance. Smith threw for 4,042 yards with 26 touchdowns, five interceptions and a 67.5 completion percentage in 2017, the best season of his career.

Washington traded cornerback Kendall Fuller and a third-round pick to the Kansas City Chiefs to acquire Smith, then gave him a four-year extension worth $94 million that includes $71 million in guaranteed money. The move was made to replace former starter Kirk Cousins, who signed a fully-guaranteed three-year, $84 million deal with the Minnesota Vikings.

Davis had an up-close view of the trials and tribulations Smith went through as the 2005 No. 1 overall pick that was once considered a bust.

"I watched Alex go through so much," Davis said. "His career was so turbulent with so many offensive coordinators and he had years where he wasn't doing well and then he had years where he started to excel. ... His game started to evolve right before he left San Francisco. Those two years where we had that roll with [head coach Jim] Harbaugh, where we went to the playoffs, Alex was a big contribution to that. He was a tremendous asset to that team and he was one of the reasons we catapulted into the playoffs like that.

"But after that, his game went to an entire different level, and this is the Alex where you see him getting in and out of the pocket, making these throws, getting hit and getting back up. I mean, this guy, he is at a different level right now. He is playing as an elite quarterback in this league, and it's great to see that, it's great to see his career, the way it started to where it is now."

Smith said last week that he was eager for workouts to begin since he hadn't had the opportunity to meet many teammates and begin to form those relationships. Davis believes it's just a matter of time.

"OTAs are huge for us because we are forced to be in an environment where you can only get to know the next guy," Davis said. "That's what I like about offseason training, because of that. It's all about relationships when you're playing this game. The better you know someone, the better you can go out there and execute these plays and play together because the coaches aren't out there, you know?"

"They're coaching us, but at the end of the day, we have to go out there and work as a group and work together. So, with offseason training, guys are able to make that connection and grow together."

C CHASE ROULLIER

Chase Roullier Devotes Training Camp Practices To Being Versatile

By Grant Cohen, Redskins.com
July 31, 2018

Chase Roullier's NFL career has been all about making adjustments.

When starting center Spencer Long went down with an injury last season, the Wyoming product had to move from being a pupil in the offensive line to a key contributor to the Redskins up front.

After starting seven games for Washington in 2017, Roullier, who projects to start at center this year, has maintained the mindset of improving at every position along the offensive line in case he's needed.

"I was impressed with Chase last year," head coach Jay Gruden said. "You know, you're not sure what you're going to get from a sixth-round draft pick, you know, from Wyoming. When Spencer [Long] went down, I think Chase had to fill that void, and he did a great job. You know, he broke his hand there for a little while missed some time too. You know, the center position is one of my biggest issues on this football [team] -- I can never have too many centers. You know, because you can't function without one.

"Chase came in here and was a very important player for us, and he's learning. Coach [Bill] Callahan has done a great job with him, and he's just going to continue to get better. You know, he's only in his second year, very limited playing time. I think with all these reps he's getting out here leading up to game day, I think he'll be a solid player for us."

Roullier played guard and center at Wyoming, which helped his transition last year being thrown into the starting center spot during the regular season. It was a change that he welcomed with open arms. What has benefited Roullier the most, however, is watching how his teammates in the group play his position, as well as other spots he could be put in, up front.

"Even though when you're not in there, you're still getting all those mental reps," Roullier said. "So you really got to take advantage of that. We go through the script before, so you kind of get an idea of what plays those guys are running. You can obviously see what techniques they're using. That always helps us and then it also helps the guys that are actually going as well. Any sort of insight you can give them from the bird's eye view, that always helps them out, too."

Roullier has been more prepared in training camp to execute everything while improving at center. While the 6-foot-4 lineman eyed his focus to playing that position last year, he has been committed to improving at guard by taking notes and listening to instruction during position meetings.

Roullier has transferred that attention to detail in meetings to the practice field at the Bon Secours Training Center when he is on the sidelines, taking mental reps of guys playing in spots similar to him.

"I'll primarily watch what the interior three are doing, especially on the run plays," Roullier said. "Then I can kind of see what calls they're making and what techniques they're using on each play. Pass, I'll take a look at the defenses a little bit more. Start to try and recognize those, get more comfortable with that on every play."

With the offensive line having to overcome a plethora of injuries throughout the season, Roullier has dedicated his time in Richmond to being versatile. If everyone manages to stay healthy for the majority of the season, the center predicts a successful 2018 campaign.

"I don't think there is a ceiling," Roullier said. "We have some of the most talented guys on our offensive line. Obviously, there's multiple Pro Bowlers on our offensive line and when they're all healthy, it's a phenomenal group. I'm just excited to be a part of that and be able to learn from those guys and work with them every day."

CB QUINTON DUNBAR

Redskins' Quinton Dunbar has a healthy contract and confidence heading into fourth year

By Kendra Andrews, The Washington Post
July 30, 2018

RICHMOND — After last season, one of the priorities for the Washington Redskins was retaining cornerback Quinton Dunbar, who they extended with a three-year deal.

In addition to maintaining depth at the position, the extension is an investment in Dunbar, who made four starts last season and could be in line for more moving forward.

In college, the former Florida Gator played wide receiver. After getting drafted by the Redskins in 2015, he transitioned to defense.

"I definitely feel better, I mean, I've been feeling better," Dunbar said. "I've been playing CB for three years now and I feel like I am doing pretty well, I am getting everything down pat. My goal of training camp is to just chop wood, get better each and every day. That's it."

Dunbar has shown steady progression over his three years in the league. Last season, he participated in 51 percent of snaps and set career highs in games played (15), tackles (35) and passes defended (8).

He hasn't done all the work himself, though. Dunbar has turned to defensive veterans on the Redskins and credits them for helping him make adjustments.

Orlando Scandrick and Josh Norman are two names Dunbar drops when thinking about who has given him advice. But it is safety D.J. Swearinger, who Dunbar refers to as "Swag," who he views as another coach.

Dunbar's deal is for $10.5 million with $5.25 million guaranteed and a $3 million signing bonus. Dunbar said coming into more money and a bigger role on the team didn't change his mind set entering training camp. For him, it all goes back to the plain and simple goal he set for himself.

"This is no different than my first training camp," Dunbar said. "I come out here to get better every day. Just compete and get better."

T TRENT WILLIAMS

Jay Gruden on Trent Williams's recovery:
'A testament to why he is the best tackle in the NFL'

By Sam Fortier, The Washington Post
August 5, 2018

RICHMOND — On a scorching Sunday morning, Trent Williams crunched pads as much as he has all training camp. The Washington Redskins left tackle, returning from a right knee injury, was cleared for full contact the day before, and this practice he seemed more active. Williams worked into the first-team offense for a few snaps as it scrimmaged the first-team defense.

In one-on-one drills, the 6-foot-5, 320-pound tackle squared off with two of the team's top edge rushers in Preston Smith and Jonathan Allen. He felt like a part of the team again, but the six-time Pro Bowl honoree knew he wasn't yet back to top form.

"I'm still knocking the rust off," Williams said. "I don't feel like I'm back to being me, but every day is getting better. My eyes are starting to adapt to guys moving 100 miles per hour. I don't know if there's anything left other than to get more reps."

When Williams didn't participate in team activities at practice, backup tackle Ty Nsekhe filled in, as he did last season when the Redskins tried to rest Williams before eventually placing him on injured reserve in mid-December. Nsekhe may have taken the lion's share of the reps so far, as Williams works on the strength and stability of his knee, but it's still unclear who will start at left tackle against the New England Patriots in Foxborough, Mass., in the pre-season opener on Thursday. Regardless, Williams is expected to be ready for the season opener at Arizona on Sept. 9.

"To get that thing fixed and to watch him rehab and get himself ready to play is just a testament to why he is the best tackle in the NFL," Coach Jay Gruden said.

This recovery period is unfamiliar territory for Williams, 30, because the surgery he had Dec. 29 was, he said, the first of his life. Since the Redskins picked Williams fourth overall out of Oklahoma in 2010, he had played through almost every injury, missing just three games from 2012 to 2015. In 2011 and 2016, the NFL suspended Williams four games for violating its substance abuse policy, but nothing seemed to stop Williams from receiving the respect of his peers — he was voted the league's 47th-best player in the 2017 NFL top 100 — and his franchise. In 2015, Williams signed a five-year, $66 million extension that includes an option after this season.

Last fall, though, Williams ran into an ailment he couldn't play through. In October, in the first quarter of a loss to Kansas City, a player rolled up on the back of Williams's right foot and wrenched his knee. He tried to get up, but his leg buckled and he fell down. Trainers helped him to the sideline, where he received treatment and returned to play after missing four snaps. Yet, in the following weeks and months, Williams rarely practiced and appeared limited in games. The team sat him on a short week for its Thanksgiving Day game against the New York Giants, and he returned for the next two games but the knee became untenable.

"That was a bad injury," Gruden said. "Hats off to him for fighting through it, because he saw what kind of injuries we had on the line and, if we took him off the line for some of those games, I don't know who would have played, quite frankly."

On Sunday, Gruden emphasized work on the goal line and in short-yardage situations, where this team struggled to convert last season. In his time spent off to the side, observing, Williams noticed his teammates respond to the ratcheted-up competition. The team went full-go, Williams said, "which we've hardly ever done [in camp] in the past." He mentioned that, at this speed, he's still regaining his feel on blocks because he wasn't accustomed to sitting out. Williams is still nervous about the knee — "I'd be lying if I said I'm not" — but he accepted this is a part of playing this position in this sport.

"It's the nature of it," Williams said. "The mental part is one of the hardest things to get over, but I'm prepared. I have a strong mentality."

WR CAM SIMS

Cam Sims followed a huge mistake with a big play and still has a shot at a roster spot

By Les Carpenter, The Washington Post
August 17, 2018

In the second preseason game of the summer that may well make or crush his football dreams, Washington Redskins rookie wide receiver Cam Sims did the one thing he could not afford to do. He made a very big mistake.

It came on the second pass thrown to him Thursday night, a beautiful spiral from Colt McCoy that should have landed in his hands and set up a first down near the goal line. Instead, the ball slipped through his fingers, crashed into his shoulder pads, careened into the air and was snatched away by Jets safety Doug Middleton, who tore off into the distance.

For a player living on the fringe of Washington's final roster, this was disaster. Sims wasn't picked in April's draft, making him one of those longest of shots who fill training camp locker rooms: a young man who must be brilliant every day just to have hope. Now in what should have been his showpiece game, he lay on the FedEx Field turf, filled with despair as his teammates chased Middleton downfield.

"Damn, man, he got a pick off me," Sims thought.

He climbed to his feet and slumped toward the bench. He was alone, with no players within 20 yards, and there was nowhere to hide. He wondered whether the Redskins would ever throw him another pass. He worried he might have blown his one good chance at the NFL.

If you want to know why preseason football games matter, why a 15-13 Redskins victory over the New York Jets is something more than an opportunity for good players to get hurt, you must know what Thursday night meant to Sims. You must know how much he has impressed Washington's coaches in training camp, how he is making the decision on the team's last wide receiver spot a challenge and about the bonds made between teammates on training camp fields.

When Sims got to the bench, he was met by McCoy.

"I'm coming back to you on the next play," the quarterback said.

Soon the Redskins' offense was on the field again, and Sims found himself lined up, alone, across from Jets safety Terrence Brooks. It was the kind of matchup he loves — despite his precarious circumstance, Sims believes there is no defensive back who can cover him one-on-one. The moment he saw Brooks by himself, he knew McCoy was going to throw his way.

Redemption came in a bullet pass, heaved extra high so only someone as tall as Sims — who is listed at 6-foot-5, 214 pounds — could seize it. He jumped, caught it and stood triumphant as the official signaled "first down." Then he threw a joyous hand in the air.

The next few moments were a blur. There was another pass, this one in the back of the end zone that he jumped high to catch for what should have been his first NFL touchdown, had the play not been called back for an illegal formation penalty.

"An unbelievable catch," Redskins Coach Jay Gruden would say later.

Watching Sims, it's easy to ask why he wasn't drafted. He has so much of what NFL teams crave: height, soft hands and a burning will to win battles with defenders. But he caught just 41 passes in four years playing for Nick Saban at Alabama and was deemed too slow by many evaluators.

Only two teams offered to sign Sims after the draft, Washington and Cincinnati. He picked the Redskins because three of his college teammates were on the roster. A silly reason, perhaps, but it might have been the perfect decision. Washington probably will keep five or six receivers, and after Josh Doctson, Jamison Crowder and Paul Richardson Jr., the roster battle is an open competition. Brian Quick has six years of NFL experience. Maurice Harris is familiar to the Redskins coaches after two years of bouncing between the practice squad and active roster. Trey Quinn was the last pick of this year's draft. Robert Davis's season-ending injury has provided a small opening for Sims. Thursday night was his chance to grab it.

Late in the game, as the stadium emptied and the clock pushed toward 11 p.m., the Redskins stood at the New York 42 with 15 seconds left, hoping to gain enough yardage to set up a game-winning field goal. Sims lined up across from Jets cornerback Rashard Robinson. He could hear Robinson shouting at him. He thought he heard the words "lock you up." He didn't listen, instead focusing on the pass he was sure was headed his way.

Then there it was in the air, and one last time he jumped, hauling in the catch for a first down at the New York 22. Dustin Hopkins came out for the winning field goal, and Sims walked to the bench again, this time to a wall of smiles and handshakes.

After the game, Gruden noted that Sims "didn't hang his head; he just came back fighting." Later, the coach added that while Sims is "raw," he has made the kind of progress coaches like to see. "When the ball's in the air, he's made more plays than he hasn't," Gruden said.

Which was about the best thing Sims could have heard on the biggest night of his football life. He stood in the locker room close to midnight, still wearing his uniform and talking about how he can take defensive backs one-on-one. The room was almost empty. His teammates had showered and dressed. He smiled.

Suddenly, his face clouded. Despite his three catches for 57 yards, something else gnawed at him.

"I don't care about [the big catches]," he said. "I care about the two I dropped."

He shook his head and turned away, perhaps knowing that on the fringe of an NFL roster, every play can be the difference between a dream fulfilled or an eternity of wondering why he let that pass bounce off his shoulder pads.

RB KAPRI BIBBS

Once among 23 kids in a house, Redskins' Kapri Bibbs chases dream

By John Keim, ESPN
August 16, 2018

RICHMOND, Va. -- The unwritten rule was basic, one that a household of 23 kids sharing two rooms and three beds had to adhere to when it came to sleeping arrangements: first come, first served. Kapri Bibbs knew if he wanted a spot on the bed, he had to be on it when it was time to sleep. And if he went to the bathroom at night, there was a good chance someone would grab the opening and he'd be back on the floor, one with no carpeting and more dirt than wood.

"Sometimes you're laying there with nine kids and a twin bed," said Bibbs, a Washington Redskins running back. "We had people laying down like sardines. One person would lay their head down that way and the other person would lay their head down [the other way] and you'd have to sleep on someone's feet and use their feet as a pillow."

Rats and mice roamed the floors of his Chicago house, as did spiders and other insects. What was supposed to be similar to a basement, he said, was really a dirt hole that flooded, bringing unwelcome critters. There were days with one meal -- Malt-O-Meal was a go-to -- and days when he witnessed shootings.

"I'm not saying it was completely a bad thing coming from those circumstances," Bibbs said. "Those are all amazing things I learned in my life by adversity and even getting to where I am now, just showing me how far you can come with faith and working hard."

It was also his normal.

"At the time, it didn't really seem like something I should really be depressed about," Bibbs said. "I had my family. Every single day was full of excitement because I was with all these other kids. We roamed the hood, we roamed the streets and it was all of us vs. anyone else out there and we would always win."

That also gave Bibbs a great deal of confidence, which was boosted by success in football. He was a high school star in Chicago, once rushing for 520 yards in a game -- third-most in Illinois state history -- and seven touchdowns in a game. In one season at Colorado State, Bibbs rushed for 1,741 yards and 30 touchdowns despite starting only six games. He rushed for 312 yards in one game and followed it a week later with 291 yards and six touchdowns.

But it's been tough for Bibbs to find a permanent home in the NFL. He spent most of two seasons on Denver's practice squad, with one regular-season game in 2015. He made it to the Broncos' active roster again in November 2016 and took a screen pass 69 yards for a score. But three games later, he suffered a season-ending high ankle sprain. Last season, he was cut by San Francisco and later was signed to the Redskins' practice squad. He spent three weeks on the active roster, finishing with 21 carries for 79 yards and 14 catches for 128 yards.

He's in a tight competition for perhaps the final running back spot. Redskins running backs coach Randy Jordan said Bibbs' background has led to determination.

One day in practice, Bibbs messed up in pass protection; he had his man lined up, but the defender got past him.

"He couldn't turn the page," Jordan said. "He looked me in the eye and said, 'Coach, put me back in; put me back in.' He wanted to rectify that, and he got in and made a tremendous play on a choice route."

"When you come from a background where you don't have a whole lot and had to fight for everything you got, you develop a shell in terms of having the mentality like, 'Hey, man, I have to grind through this. When things get tough, this is the way we have to roll.'"

For Bibbs, it's about doing more than just making a roster.

"I want to be one of the best that's ever played this game," he said. "I'm still young and I've got more than enough in the tank. My IQ for the game is on a whole other level. It's time for me to show the world what I've got."

Things remain difficult for members of Bibbs' family. He said a cousin was shot and killed earlier this month. Bibbs could not attend the funeral because he was in training camp in Richmond. When he was younger, Bibbs said he witnessed a man get shot in the neck by a shotgun, the force sending the man flying through the air.

"That city needs help all the way around," he said about Chicago. "Man, if I could tell you how many times I've seen shootings and stuff happen. I hate to say it, but I'm almost numb to it now, growing up seeing that stuff ever since I was a little kid. That was just something that was normal in Chicago and you couldn't hide it from anybody. It was different in Chicago than a lot of other hoods, a lot of other ghettos, because no one in the hood was ever wealthy. Everyone was dirt poor. Everyone was Section 8. If someone did pop with something, someone else wanted it. That's how a lot of problems started."

At about age 16, Bibbs started worrying about the path he was traveling. His football talent was evident, but so were his issues in the classroom. Bibbs had help, from football coaches to his mother and grandmother. But he needed to change; he said his GPA went from a 1.7 to a 3.2.

"I wasn't handling my business or staying out of trouble," he said. "I wasn't a role-model kid. Something just clicked once I saw how serious it was and how bad I loved football and how I wanted to succeed in life. I had to change everything. I had to do something different."

Waiting For His Chance

Kapri Bibbs just played one season of major college football and left after his sophomore season at Colorado State. Undrafted in 2014, he's played in 15 NFL games.

His mother, Stacey Griffin, helped provide a blueprint for how to emerge. She went to school and earned degrees -- she's now working on a doctorate in psychology -- and eventually became a multi-state real estate broker who also owns her own construction company. She did well enough to move her kids to a five-bedroom house out of danger. The messages she shared over the phone are similar to the ones Bibbs expressed during an interview after practice.

"It's just opportunities," Griffin said. "There are a lot of good kids that come from hard times or from the ghetto, especially being African-American. We usually start at the bottom. You're witnessing resilience and him being able to stay focused and ignore the noise, the negativity that is said about you and your culture. One of his gifts is that he knew how to find the right people."

Bibbs' family stayed in the house with 23 people until Kapri was around 10 or 11 years old. After that it was a year in foster care. Then his grandmother gained custody. Eventually they moved into a one-bedroom apartment with, he said, 14 or 15 kids -- all of whom slept in the living room.

"We just tried to find our way around the system so we didn't have to be in it," he said.

His mother occasionally talks to students, and her message often centers on letting them know what they can accomplish despite their surroundings. That's also the impetus for Bibbs' foundation -- "Keep Letting Them Believe." He runs a camp in the summer and buys materials for underprivileged schools.

"You still thrived, you still survived," Griffin said. "What is it now with Kapri that he'd be afraid of? He's not afraid of failure, not afraid of throwing yourself on the line, not afraid to try and go for it. What they consider to be, 'Wow, 23 kids; wow, this economic depression,' he had laughter and food and people. We had a lot of smiles and a lot of good times."

Bibbs understands what he went through; he also chooses to focus more on lessons learned.

"I grew up faster because I knew the value of money. I knew the value of family," he said. "I knew the value of wealth and between being wealthy and being rich. Our family wasn't wealthy, but we were rich in morals, rich in family. My family overshadowed everything. I wouldn't have the way I was raised any other way."
