

WASHINGTON COMMANDERS

Welcome to the Command Post!

*ICYMI: The Washington Commanders Pay Tribute to Sean Taylor at FedExField;
Showcase Custom Sneakers for My Cause, My Cleats; and Welcome Youth for Flag Football Tournament*

In Case You Missed It:

The Washington Commanders launched the Season of Giving against the Atlanta Falcons, posting a 19-13 victory over the Falcons. Ahead of Sunday's game, the Commanders revealed the permanent Sean Taylor Memorial installation and released the Sean Taylor Legacy Project limited-edition merchandise line that was designed and inspired by Sean Taylor's daughter, Jackie Taylor. Additionally, the team kicked off the NFL's annual My Cause, My Cleats campaign, raising awareness and proceeds for philanthropic initiatives and causes. Commanders players and coaches will wear their cleats during Sunday's Week 13 matchup against the New York Giants. Also, youth from across the country converged on The Fields at RFK Campus for a chance to compete in the 2023 NFL FLAG Championships at this year's Pro Bowl Games.

Commanders Honor Sean Taylor at FedExField

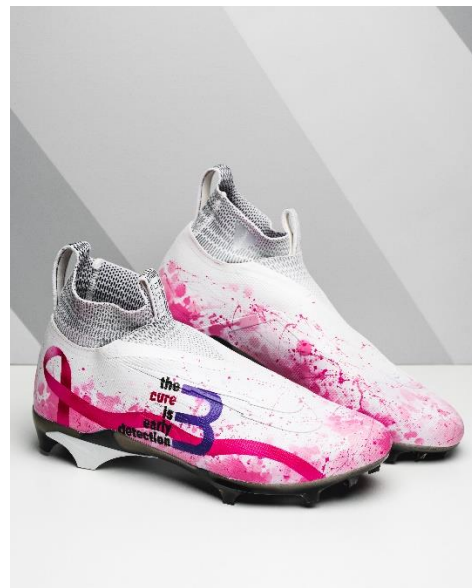

On Sunday, November 27, the Washington Commanders unveiled a new Sean Taylor Memorial Installation at FedExField and players wore "21" helmet decals to commemorate Sean Taylor's life and legacy on the 15th anniversary of his passing. In collaboration with the Sean Taylor Legacy Project, the Commanders also launched the Sean Taylor Legacy Project limited-edition merchandise line that was designed and inspired by Sean Taylor's daughter, Jackie Taylor. All proceeds from the merchandise will benefit gun violence prevention initiatives. To learn more about the collection visit our fact sheet HERE; for images and b-roll of the installation event, click HERE; and for the limited-edition merchandise, go to the Commanders Team Store online HERE.

Commanders Begin My Cause, My Cleats Campaign

The Commanders kicked off the NFL's annual My Cause, My Cleats initiative by launching an auction featuring over seventy-five custom cleats that will be worn by Washington Commanders players and coaches this Sunday, December 4, the NFL's official designated My Cause, My Cleats game. Commanders' My Cause, My Cleats were designed by renowned cleat designer Joe Castro of Undefined Arts in Los Angeles in addition to a collaboration of local artists, including DMV area natives and long-time Commanders fans David Zambrano from Dez Customs and Mohammed Gafar from Kreativecustomkicks.

Proceeds from this year's auction will go to a variety of local and national nonprofits including: The Boys and Girls Club of Greater Washington, Autism Speaks, The National Museum of the American Latino, The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society, and the Arthritis Foundation. Bidding is now open HERE. Interactive photos of featured shoes and descriptions can be found HERE.

Youth Come Together for Flag Football Tournament

On Sunday, November 20, the Washington Commanders hosted the 2022 NFL FLAG Regional Tournament Series presented by Subway at The Fields at RFK Campus in Northeast DC. Over the course of the day, sixty-five youth flag football teams from seven different states played for a shot to compete in the 2023 NFL FLAG Championships at Pro Bowl Games in Las Vegas. Athletes were gifted an NFL club jersey, official flag belts, championship rings, and lunch catered by Subway. Additionally, Washington Legends Rocky McIntosh and Fred Davis joined the Washington Commanders Charitable Foundation in distributing nearly 1,000 tickets to all teams at the tournament for the Atlanta Falcons vs. Washington Commanders game on November 27th. Photos and b-roll from the tournament can be found HERE.

