Head Coach Dan Quinn

Opening Statement:
“All right, everybody, let's get rolling. We met today as a team and after we got done with the game, we've got to turn the page quickly after the corrections. [We’re playing the] division leader at their spot. And we've got to be ready to go and get into that quickly. Big picture wise – meetings and workouts today, gonna jog through tomorrow. Wednesday we'll practice here and then hit the road. So, we're ready to get rolling.”

On maintaining a trust among the team that the results will come and that the coaches can get them where they want to be:
“That's a great question. It's the hardest part of developing, when you're wanting to measure the improvement and sometimes it doesn't show up on the statute. I've seen consistency in different areas with different people of the arrow going up. But what I do know is that like, ‘Man, do we have to put all these together.’ There's been halves and quarters and good plays and just, man, that's what I'm looking for the most is consistent football. I talked about a little bit last night of consistency all the way through. We know it wins and that's really what I'm chasing the most right now.”

On if he’s getting tired of repeating the same message:
“Yeah. [You’re] not [being] blunt, and yes, I am tired of it and I'm not gonna back off it. Just finding another way to push it, another way to develop it, another way to go after it, because I know that works. And there's times when I like the phases and how connected we are, but at the end of it, man, ones that could be either self-inflicted ones or just some inconsistent performance that's what we have to nail down, man. So hit different things from practice, meeting-wise, and here we all do the same thing again this week, not backing off at it one bit.”

On if the offensive playcalling has been up to his standards:
“Yeah, I think there's a lot in that question. And how can we play at our best? And that's really what I'm chasing to make sure. Can we be more consistent in the run game? For sure. In this game, I wasn't, didn't think offensive line-wise was up to our standard. Give credit some to LA [Los Angeles Rams], but we do get to go after it again this week. I like the system. I like what we can be capable of. And so, to chase that and to see that come together the whole time, that's really what we're pushing towards, and we're not gonna back off that. So, I'd like us to see more consistency in terms of the way we execute it.”

On who would be at center if C Lucas Patrick was out this week:
“Yeah. [C/G] Nick [Allegretti] and [C] Matt [Gulbin] would be the two candidates. And so, we'll go through that as we get into tonight and into tomorrow. But makes it more challenging with Lucas in the protocol for sure on a short week."

On if he's considering personnel changes based on performance and pre-snap penalties:
"Yeah, it's a fair question and that's what I'm trying to dig into to find it. It is a little more challenging on a shorter week than not, but just because the reps are quick. But if we don't hit the execution like we want that's the name of the game, to find what we can do and how we can do it well. So, at this time, I'm trying to look at it collectively. What do we need to do to put people in the best spots to do their thing? And if we get past that and finding it shortcoming in that way, then no, I would not hesitate."

On his interactions with Managing Partner Josh Harris on a day-to-day basis:
"So, I'll tell you day of game, obviously meet pregame and postgame, and at that point, a little bit of the game plan of what we might do, postgame, what I saw. And then we talk on Mondays, about the game. Sometimes it's with video, sometimes it's not. And then generally one time towards the end of the week. Just to kind of give an update of the team and where we're at. And so, it's kind of not as much in the middle, but a little bit at the end, here's the game, here's what we're thinking. And then Monday, did it go like we want in terms of what we thought and give him some feedback as I'm going through that, just trying to educate he and [President of HBSE] Bob's [Myers] on it a lot as well."

On CB Amik Robertson's injury update:
"He ended up doing better with his ankle, so I would say I'm optimistic as we're heading into tomorrow and into Wednesday. It was a good turnaround for him."

On if he's optimistic that WR Treylon Burks will be ready for Thursday's game:
"Yes and so, he got some in Saturday, and then we'll get more in tomorrow to see what his readiness looks like. But yeah, we're definitely more optimistic heading into this one. So tomorrow will be a big day to have a better sense of where we're at."

On if Thursday's game versus the New York Giants is a 'must win' and on balancing the messaging behind the importance of each game:
"Yeah, well, what I told the guys is I've been in the league a long time and I've seen a lot of crazy scenarios, so you never really know how the season's gonna play out. So, I generally refrain from, like, the one game statements. But what I will say, is like, man, we need this win this week. There's no doubt. And I think everyone in this building understands that so I'm not big on declarations, but I think everybody here knows the importance of this game Thursday night and our readiness to go battle the division leaders at their spot. So yeah, we all know how badly we need this."

On the criticism Offensive Coordinator David Blough has been receiving and if there's anything he sees behind the scenes about Blough he wants to share:
"Yeah, I see a lot, and the hard part is, the end in those moments, those are the ones we gotta nail. And the execution is everybody. And you've kinda heard me say that before, it's players, it's coaches, it's all of us kinda digging in. But I would say this is, like an incredibly competitive and talented guy, so they don't see what goes into all the calls to get there. Are they difficult situations like yesterday? Yes. Do we need to find our ways to get the ball in the end zone at the end of the game? Also, yes. But man, that's collectively to give ourself the best shot to get after it."

On the trade deadline coming up and what yesterday's result might've changed:
"No change from the outcome from yesterday. Like, [General Manager] Adam [Peters], his team, this time of year, discussions and calls, those kind of things are normal procedures, but no change from yesterday regarding any of that. And that's definitely one that he'd hit you guys up on, but no change in that spot.

On WR Stefon Diggs' involvement so far with such high expectations:
"I love his fire, man, I really do, and the competitive part. So, he hit a couple targets earlier, and some that maybe he's also first in the read to get there. Whatever reason, you have to get off that or the read wasn't there, the coverage took you somewhere else. So, he's definitely in the front of our thinking, and so we need him, you know. That's why he's in the front of our thinking in those critical spots. So, certainly one towards the end, that gives us a chance to go after it, but no, he's always in the front of our thoughts. I love his fire. I love what he brings. And like most excellent players, as many ops as you can.

On the offensive line performance and the run game these past few games:
"I didn't feel like yesterday was up to a standard, you know, for sure. I wanted to make sure, can we stay, can we stick with it? Can we keep finding ways to keep attacking? And there's going to be some plays that are the ones and zeros, and that's part of going, but I also want us to make sure we stay with it and keep going. Some of these, the third quarter, I thought just went rough, three-and-out, three-and-out. And those affect that in a big way too, like, less cracks at it, and so more cracks, the better. And that's what I want us to do, man, sustain some drives, convert some third downs, get into it again, and that'll be an important part of this week for us to do that. But I liked how the team is practicing with it, going there. We're not getting enough shots at it and that's not due just to handing it off more, that's due to extending drives, and we've got to improve upon ourself on third down. We just have to."

On more snaps being within a short section of the field as opposed to long pass attempts:
"That's a good question. Like most things, there's some combination of both. On this particular play, does the coverage dictate where you can go? Certainly having, hopefully, [WR] Trey[lon [Burks] back gives us another element into that as well. But it is a little bit of both. Like, you have to take your shots in order to try to generate some explosive plays. [WR] Terry [McLaurin] was certainly one. Trey was another one on the downfield throws, but dialing him up, having him blocked on some big, long play passes, that's there. I liked even some of the design yesterday. It wasn't a long, long one, but [WR] Antonio [Williams] coming inside on a play pass, coming back out, so I thought that was good design, good execution. So seeing him get involved in some of the play pass, downfield throws, I thought was an important part."

On receiving feedback from teammates and correcting it into something more consistent:
"Yes. And, this probably going back to John's question earlier about working on things and not seeing the result on it, so to have a false start by the center and a false start by the left tackle frustrated [us] because we put a lot into that this week, and that is exactly the collaboration that we've spoken about on specific cadences. When do we use them, how are they gonna be executed, because it wasn't on a silent one that jammed us up yesterday. So seeing how we communicate, how we execute them, those are the ones that we're not there and we're gonna keep working till we get it right. And we made strides. I like the process that we went through, even though we had two false starts in the game. I did like the process we're going to get that improved, and I'm certain that is going to take place."

On the many injuries their wide receivers have been having and if prep or recovery may have something to do with it:
“Yeah, both. And, coming out of camp, it was one of the healthier groups, and that had been not the case the season prior, so we thought we maybe turned a corner, and then early on then to have injuries, you know, Terry and Trey and now [WR} Dyami Brown], you know, significant contributors into that. So, yes, every injury does basically, an audit, not just at receiver, but any position – were there any conditions that, whether it was from practice or the training or fueling or any of it? So, we do as deep of a dive as we can on every one. In addition to that, the performance staff puts a lot into how much, who needs what recovery. So yeah, we're trying to uncover every stone to find an edge to level that out, not just at receiver, but overall.”

On how he knows the coaches and players are taking his feedback well:
“I interact with [them] a lot. I give a lot of feedback. So, when it's not being met, what tweaks do we have to meet to make? What things need to change? That's usually where I'm at. I ask for their input. If it's a coaching question that I have, if this is happening, what is contingency X, Y, Z to do that? But they know I'm agitated about it to make sure it's the whole game and playing and being competitive, like that's not what we stand for. Playing tough, it's gotta be the whole time. That's what we're after. And that fuels me to challenge us to get that part right. I believe in them. I believe in the staff and the players. I like the practice they've thrown, but, man, it comes down to the execution of the game. And that's the name of it, and that's what we gotta get done.”

On if there were designs to try and limit OLB Myles Garrett:
“So yeah, there were some that we did have chip or help. Some are what's called quick game, so it's three-step timing. So, on those ones, you generally don't. But yeah, if we had a shot to say, ‘Man, every chance that you can to give him and Aaron [Donald], the attention they deserve, yes.’ And I was kinda going back to David's spot, like having more cracks at the run, man, that also helps too, to make sure we're not into a drop-back game. That's not what we wanted to be facing, you know, their interior and the rushers in general. But yeah, you're always wanting to look, what are the contingencies when he's not at defensive end, and then he's over the center, and how do you organize that? So that's another one that goes into it. You're under a good topic, and those are the type of players, like, they can't ruin the game. And so when they do, man, what's coming up here this week, we've gotta get ready to go make sure that does not happen.”
